Britain Gains Aid Of Russia to End Crisis in Ethiopia

Soviet Also to Insist on League Showdown in African Situation.

Army of 500,000 Seen Duce's Aim

New Bid Made to United States for Cooperation to Keep Peace.

The Itala-Ehiopian Crisis.

Britain rallies Soviet and United States support for her plan to force League of Nations action to avert war.

League expected to make final bid to halt hostilities at meeting tentatively set for July 29.

London hears Mussolini intends to send 500,000 troops into East Africa.

By the United Press.

London, July 24.—Britain today rallied support in her new determination to avert war between Italy and Ethiopia. The Soviet Union indicated willingness to back Britain in a showdown on League of Nation's effectiveness as a peace instrument. The government made still another bid for positive United States co-operation.

Diplomatic developments included:

1. Britain reiterated vehement opposition to proposals allowing the league to shelve full responsibility in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

2. Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare assured Parliament "the government always is ready to co-operate with the United States in seeking to preserve peace."

3. The Soviet Union and Turkey supported Britain in her determination for a Geneva showdown, even at risk of an Italian withdrawal from the league.

4. Lloyds declined to offer quotations on possibility of an Italo-Ethiopian war. However, premium rates were being worked out. Officials said "considerable time would be required."

5. Rumors Britain was sending additional troops to Africa were denied.

To Insist on Airing.

While the cabinet was meeting authorities decided definitely the league council must deal with the whole threat of war. Italy's disinclination to let the council go beyond discussion of the late conciliation commission's task will not prevent Britain from insisting upon an airing of merits of the entire conflict.

Moscow's support of anticipated British action in the council was designed to force a league investigation of merits of the conflict, at least to gain time while an inquiry could proceed under articles 11, 12 or 15 of the covenant. Russia at least hoped for a compromise averting war.

The United States came back into the picture in Commons when Hoare, replying to Gen. Edward L. Spears' question as to whether Britain is endeavoring to act in concert with any American policy to avert war between Italy and Ethiopia, said:

"I have already communicated to the American ambassador Britain's satisfaction with recent utterances by Secretary of State Cordell Hull regarding obligations undertaken by all signatories of the Kellogg Pact."

Evades Query.

Hoare refused to commit Britain in advance of an outbreak of hostilities when asked whether the great powers would carry out their obligations under the league covenant.

"The matter is to be determined in the light of circumstances of the particular case and in consideration of such provisions of the covenant as are applicable."

Maxim Litvinoff, president of the council and Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, indicated he would oppose Italian expansion in Ethiopia. While emphasizing the Soviet's attitude for security and against aggression, he will remind the Chamber Poisonous, Cries House of Lords

By the Associated Press.

London, July 24.—The House of Lords had a headache today.

Peers lodged pleas for air-conditioning, "like they have in the United States Senate," and asked the government to have a chemist investigate the "poison saturated atmosphere in their chamber."

"It is a scandal that their lordships must suffer severe headaches because they are so public spirited they leave the fresh air of their country homes for duty in the House of Lords, where atmosphere is saturated with poison," Marquis Linlithgow said.

Nazis Disband Youth Group Of Catholics

Property Confiscated; New Thrust at Younger Set in Church Feared.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 24.—Germany's Nazis, unsuccessful in their two-year fight for supremacy in religious matters, shifted their offensive to another front today with swift, sharp thrusts at young people's church groups.

The Baden state government announced dissolution of the Catholic Deutsche Jugendkraft (German youth-strength), confiscating its properties.

Quickly—so soon afterward as to indicate his orders came from Berlin—the governor of the lower Bavaria and Oberpfalz ordered that the children of Nazi officials could participate in only three Nazi organizations. These are the Young Folk, the League of German Girls and the Hitler Youth.

Some church circles said ominously that the next month almost certainly would bring further strict repressive measures, regardless of the German-Vatican concordat or Adolf Hitler's promises, to enable Nazi leaders to announce "complete liquidation" of the church question.

Jews meanwhile more and more were staying away from public gathering places, waiting for the newest anti-Semitic storm to subside.

Mayor Hits Race.

Mayor Treff of Steglitz, Berlin borough, was today's spokesman for the anti-Semitic faction. Demanding Jewish stores be boycotted, he said:

"The shameless behavior of certain Jewish elements and other state enemies has recently made necessary special regulations. It is more than ever necessary for each public employe to buy only from German fellow citizens."

Agitation against the Steel Helmet veterans' organization continued, despite reported Nazi promises that it would not be molested further for the time being. An editorial in the Nazi newspaper Rhein Front demanded the group's dissolution on the ground all such organizations should be made part of the "national unity."

"This league has now lost all its independent symbolism," the article asserted.

The edict requiring Nazi children of lower Bavaria and Oberpfalz to limit their allegiance to the three Nazi groups was explained thus:

Influence Feared.

"On the premise that religion is endangered, priests try to hold youths in order to use them for their political interests. As long as church leaders do not succeed in forcing church sub-leaders to adopt

Troops Seize Mexican City In Rebellion

Border Police Aid Army as Peasants Clamor for Mayor to Quit.

Tabasco State Dictator Hanged in Effigy in National Capital.

By the Associated Press.

Matamoros, Tamaulipas, Mexico, July 24.—Federal troops, manning machine guns and prepared to "preserve order," took over the city of Matamoros late today and temporarily halted plans of 2,000 rebel agrarians forcibly to evict city officials.

Gen. Gabriel Cervera, commander of the detachment of federal soldiers, pressed city police, immigrations and customs employes and all available troops into service and blanketed the city administration building block.

The Agrarians, who had promised to use arms if necessary in ousting Mayor Rafael Munguia and his subordinates, as part of general disorders in the State of Tamaulipas, remained quietly at their camps on the outskirts of the city.

Armed Guards Stand Ready.

Inside and outside the administration building, armed federal soldiers and police stood ready for any move. The air was tense and some observers predicted Mayor Munguia would vacate his post tonight.

There was no confirmation of reports reaching here that Enrique Conseco, architect and engineer of Victoria, Mexico, would be named to succeed Gov. Rafael Villarreal, center of the stormy uprising, in the event he should leave office.

Gov. Villarreal, in a copyrighted story published by the Brownsville (Tex.) Herald, said, however, that he had no intention of quitting, and followed his vigorous denial with a statement that President Lazaro Cardenas had telegraphed him support of his position.

Blame Portes Gil.

"Emilo Portes Gil (former President of Mexico) is behind the trouble," declared Villarreal. "The legislative authorities of the state are supporting me. There are seven state deputies, and they are all my supporters. Likewise, the judicial forces of the state are supporting my government.

"President Cardenas told me that any complaints the peasants have should be made through legal channels. He has sent the minister of the interior, Salvano Barba Gonzales, here to receive these complaints.

"I will go to Tampico, where I will confer with Gonzales, and I believe that we will be able to work out the troubles. I take the fact that the federal government demands that grievances be made through legal channels as indication of support for me against a forcible ouster."

He commented that "the situation is more unjustified alarm than anything else."

"I am particularly anxious to avoid bloodshed," he said.

Political Feud Held Basis.

The present trouble, the Herald reported, had its inception in a political feud between Portes Gil and Villarreal two years ago.

Portes Gil came to the border, Villarreal's stronghold, to campaign against Villarreal's election and the Herald said he was greeted with abuse. Friction arose between the state and federal government, and speakers at Villarreal's election charged the federal government with meddling in state affairs.

The agrarians have stood by President Cardenas and Portes Gil during the hard times of the last few months, the Herald said, adding that they are seeking the scalp of Gov. Villarreal and other ranking officials.

Villarreal said his foes (the agrarists) numbered but 1,200, and "not the 12,000 to 20,000 that has been reported."

The Dog Days.

FROM the ancient Egyptians down the ages to Homer Hartman, the traffic officer at Fourteenth and F streets, everyone, with the possible exception of the Eskimos, has nursed a dislike for dog days.

Ever since King Tut-ankh-amen, disagreement has prevailed as to the beginning and ending of the dog-day period, but Milton and milkmen, Dante and dowagers, Homer and Hottentots—all attest to the physical discomfort which is a reminder of its presence.

The dog days begin today, according to the Old Farmer's Almanac, and end on September 5. Given a little encouragement, Science Service will tell you July 3-August 12 is the real thing. Webster's unabridged dictionary is inclined to the same 40-day span.

Canny and conservative, the United States Weather Bureau would not go out on a limb. Its experts don't think much of the dog-day tradition anyway.

"Dog days? Ha! ha! I'll turn you over to Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Weightman, our forecasters," replied Assistant Chief Charles C. Clark to the query.

"Dog days? Ha! ha!" responded R. Hanson Weightman (Charles L. Mitchell, his colleague, was out at the time). "I'll take you up to Mr. Humphreys (William J.). He knows about those things."

"Dog days? Ha! ha!" said Mr. Humphreys, meteorological physicist, whose hobby is delving into the mysteries of St. Swithin's day, groundhog day, dog days and other debatable recurrences.

But he went sufficiently beyond the "Ha! Ha!" to explain that no one seems to know exactly when dog days begin (as if it mattered) except that it's always in late summer, that it refers to the time when Sirius, the dog star, rises with the sun and that the 30 to 40 day period has been recognized for thousands of years.

To astronomers, dog days begin with the heliacal rising of Sirius. To the much abused "man in the street" they mean the time of year when the shirt sticks to the skin most stubbornly.

Charles Fitzhugh Talman, librarian of the Weather Bureau and well known author of meteorological books and papers, proffered documentary evidence that the ancients regarded the event with fear and dread, not to mention respect.

It seems that Sirius is not so hot—at least not so red—as it was in the days of the early Greeks and Romans, who thought droughts and pestilence resulted from its joint rising with the sun. The word Sirius itself is from the Greek and means "scorching."

"It is the only star known to us," says Richard Hinckley Allen in his book ('Star Names and Their Meanings'), "with absolute certitude in the Egyption records.

Dante, Milton, Homer, Pope and Spensen are among the literary greats who have established the torrid terrors of dog days in their writings.

Utility Parley Split by Aids Of President

Deadlock Is Threatened With Resentment at Senate Tactics.

House Conferees Fight Presence of Cohen and De Vane.

By James D. Secrest.

Senate and House conferees on the Wheeler-Rayburn holding company bill drew further apart yesterday in a row over whether two Administration legislative aids should be allowed to participate in the conference as committees in both chambers promised further sensational disclosures in connection with their investigations of the power lobby.

The breach among conferees further threatened a deadlock on the utility measure as House members expressed resentment over tactics employed by the Senate lobby committee to discredit representatives who fought the "death sentence" clause of the bill.

Representative Huddleston (Democrat), of Alabama, took the lead in protesting against presence at the conference of Dozier A. De Vane, solicitor of the Federal Power Commission, and Benjamin Cohen, of the Public Works Administration, who were President Roosevelt's chief spokesmen in the drafting of the Senate bill.

For Utility Lobbyists.

He insisted that if the Administration had the right to bring in its legislative aids the public utility lobbyists have an equal right to sit in at the party, but he added that he had no desire to bring them in.

Three of the five House conferees supported Huddleston, with only Representative Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, siding with the Senate conferees. After almost two hours the conferees adjourned until tomorrow morning with the issue still undecided.

Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, of the House Rules Committee, later in the day announced that his committee will resume its lobby hearings at 10 o'clock this morning in the caucus room of the old House Office Building.

The Senate Lobby Committee, which yesterday sought to link members of Congress with John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power & Light Co., will resume questioning Carpenter at 10:30 o'clock this morning in the hope that his memory is refreshed about talks with Representatives which he could not recall yesterday.

He will be asked to shed further light on a mysterious, newspaper-wrapped box which Senator Black (Democrat), of Alabama, insinuated he had given to a member of the House on the Sunday before the vote on the "death sentence."

Carpenter, calmly answering persistent questions, repeated that he "could not remember" the incident. He said he might have received such a visitor in his suite at the Mayflower Hotel, but he was confident he hadn't given away anything "unless it was a box of cigars."

The name of Representative Nat Patton (Democrat), of Texas, was mentioned by the Senate inquisitors several times, but Carpenter insisted he could not recall whether Patton had visited him on the Sunday in question.

Patton, upon learning that his name had been brought into the inquiry, was indignant and denounced the questioning as "a vicious insinuation." He admitted visiting Carpenter with his family on two previous occasions, but said he was in Annapolis on the day the mysterious box reputedly was passed.

House Seeks Limelight.

An effort to take the limelight away from the Senate inquiry and to turn it on the House investigation was seen in O'Connor's formal statement that among the witnesses would be "a prominent figure in the lobbying activity, who, since last March, has been very active against the 'death sentence' and has been entertaining lavishly in his apartments in a prominent Washington hotel."

It was subsequently learned that a witness to be heard today is D. B. Robinson, of the D. B. Robinson Investment Co. of Chicago, who has been residing at the Shoreham Hotel.

Dr. Hugh S. Magill, president of the American Federation of Utility Investors, also has been called. Dr. Magill was attacked several times

Roosevelt Assails Plan To Exempt Companies' Charity Gifts From Tax

Roosevelt Nominee for Virgin Island Governor Not Well Received at Capitol; Dr. Amy Stoddard Forced Out of Board of Parole.

As dissatisfaction on Capitol Hill with the selection of Lawrence W. Cramer to be Governor of the Virgin Islands became apparent, it was revealed yesterday that an experienced social worker was forced to resign from the Federal Parole Board to make way for the transfer of T. Webber Wilson from the post of Federal district judge in the insular possession.

Wilson was named to the Parole Board Tuesday at the same time that the President removed Paul M. Pearson as Governor of the Virgin Islands and named him to a post in the PWA housing division. Cramer, Lieutenant Governor of St. Croix, one of the Virgin Islands group, was nominated as Pearson's successor.

It came to light yesterday that prior to these moves on Tuesday Attorney General Homer S. Cummings asked for the resignation of Dr. Amy Stannard as a member of the Parole Board in "order to create a vacancy on the board." Dr. Stannard, who had served as the only woman member of the board since 1930, tendered her resignation. Wilson, a protege of Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, was immediately named to succeed her.

Meanwhile Chairman Millard E. Tydings, of the Senate Territories and Insular Affairs Committee, which has been investigating the Pearson regime in the Virgin Islands, announced that within a few days the inquiry would be resumed and carried to conclusion in order to determine measures that will assure political and economic stability for the islanders.

He made this announcement on leaving the White House after he and four other members of the committee spent almost an hour discussing the Virgin Islands situation with the President. He explained the visit by saying the committee wished to know the Administration's plans in order that the committee might proceed with clarity and purpose.

Tydings said it would not be correct to say that the sole reason for the White House conference was to protest against the nomination of Cramer, as reported on Capitol Hill. Nevertheless, it is known that members of the committee were surprised and chagrined when the

Crime Report Slashed, Name Of Garnett Out

Nearly All the 'Dynamite' Taken From Document by House Group.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Nearly all of the "dynamite" was extracted yesterday from the House District Committee report on Washington crime as the committee decimated its report to the point where it was hardly recognizable.

After the committee finished its thorough job of retracting most of its original charges and recommendations, the document contained no reference whatever to Leslie C. Garnett, United States Attorney, and his assistant, Karl W. Kindleberger.

The majority report, as at first submitted to the House, demanded the removal from office of Garnett and Kindleberger for incompetence.

Virtually the only important portion of the report left intact was a section in which Inspector Albert J. Headley was condemned for the "gentleman's agreement" between Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, and District officials which led to the inspector's promotion to assistant superintendent of police.

Once the report is doctored along the lines ordered by the committee and resubmitted to the House it will resemble in only a few particulars the document formally presented several weeks ago and then recalled when Postmaster General Farley reputedly stepped in and used his influence to have committee members change their vote and reconsider the report.

Despite the committee's retraction, one of its members, Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, voiced pleasure over its accomplishments.

"The damage has been done anyhow," he told reporters. "Mr. Garnett was censured and he didn't

Opens Senate Debate With Surprise Thrust at Administration Bill.

By Robert C. Albright.

Opening debate on the Administration's bank bill with a surprise attack on central banking proposals, Senator Glass, of Virginia, yesterday denounced counter moves for concentrated control of money and credit as "repugnant to everything we have done."

The scalpel-tongued Virginian, who after months of committee deadlock forced an Administration compromise on its original banking proposals, carried the assault into the territory of the central bank advocates, who plan to offer liberalizing amendments to the bill.

"If anything was deliberately and decisively determined in 1913, it was that this country did not want a central bank," said Glass. "It did not want a central bank even in the skillful guise of the so-called Aldrich bill. It did not want a central bank at all."

Glass spoke for more than an hour, virtually without interruption. He discussed in detail the original bank bill proposals of Gov. Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, and the various committee steps by which they were modified. He said the Federal Reserve Board had failed to stop the market crash of 1929, as it woud fail again if given the board powers proposed by the central bank flank.

He had not concluded when the Senate recessed, and will take the floor again when the chamber convenes today. Later, Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, who expects to offer the so-called Coughlin central bank bill as an amendment to the pend-

President Faces Struggle With Social Groups on Program.

Chest Head Starts Publicity Campaign

House Committee May Arrange New Rate Schedules.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday stepped into a controversy, which promises to be sharp and hot, with the organized charities and social workers of the country when he expressed strenuous opposition to proposals to exempt from Federal income taxes gifts by corporations to charity up to 5 per cent of their net earnings.

In reply to a question as to his attitude toward this proposal the President, at his semiweekly press conference, contended that in making contributions to charity corporations were in effect buying public good-will and that he disapproved of such gifts. He recalled that as Governor of New York he had vetoed a bill exempting public utility contributions to charity from taxation.

Publicity Prepared.

The President's attack on corporation contributions to charity and his positive statement opposing granting any tax exemption along that line came just as Allen T. Burns, executive vice president of the Community Chests and Councils, Inc., was about to launch a Nation-wide publicity campaign in behalf of the idea.

He had ready for release a statement urging that such gifts be exempted from taxation, to be issued on behalf of himself, Mgr. R. Marcellus Wagner, president of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, and William J. Shroder, president of the National Council of Jewish Federations.

Although surprised at the coincidence of the President's attack on the tax exemption proposal—just as it was to be launched, Burns was not taken back. He immediately issued his prepared statement and followed that up by calling a press conference at which he challenged the President's contentions.

Roosevelt Quoted.

Turning one of the President's own phrases against him, Burns asserted that "any conception of corporation responsibility that does not include an obligation to local private charities belongs to the horse and buggy days."

He contended that refusal to lift the tax on charitable gifts by corporations would be a "body blow" to private welfare agencies, adding that "the President is now trying to cut off the main source of income for the very organizations he has always encouraged." He estimated corporation contributions to private charities at about $20,000,000 annually or 25 per cent of the total income of these organizations.

Meanwhile on Capitol Hill Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, now engaged in drafting the tax bill to which the proposed exemption provision will be offered, said that despite much propaganda in favor of the proposal, he did not think it would be adopted.

Other Developments.

Other developments of the day in the tax legislation situation were:

Reports of increasing hostility in the Ways and Means Committee toward the President's repeated demand for a graduated corporation income tax.

Doughton insisted that all proposals being considered by the committee were in a tentative stage and might be revised later, including the schedule of inheritance tax rates made public Tuesday.

Greater secrecy surrounded the deliberations of the Ways and Means Committee after Doughton assailed as "traitors" members giving information to the press.

Doughton reiterated that the committee "will write the bill" although it will be glad to receive any recommendations or suggestions from the Treasury. It is understood a Treasury memorandum is ready for the committee.

Schoolboy, 11, Gets Five Years For Fatal Stabbing of Foe, 16

By the Associated Press.

Wartburg, Tenn., July 24—Freckle-faced George Snow, 11-year-old school boy, was convicted today by a jury of farmers of voluntary manslaughter for the fatal stabbing of Johnnie Holt, 16, last February on a country road near here. His punishment was fixed at five years in the State reformatory.

Defense attorneys announced an appeal to the State Supreme Court and Judge Jesse L. Rodgers allowed the lad his freedom under bond.

The shirt-sleeved jury announced its verdict after 30 minutes of deliberation.

Facing between 600 and 700 spectators, many of whom drove for miles to attend the trial, young Snow, dressed in brown knee pants and white shirt, testified he stabbed Holt "because he was throwing rocks at me and I thought he was going to kill me."

Rosa Holt, 14, black-haired and blue-eyed, told a different story of the slaying. She was the State's only eye-witness.

She testified that young Snow drew a pocket knife from his sleeve and plunged it in her brother's breast after stoning them from ambush. She said Snow demanded what right they had on the little-traveled road over which they were returning home from their grandmother's place.

The defendant squirmed nervously in the witness chair and kept repeating, 'I didn't intend to kill him."

Tom Heflin, of Oratory Fame, Gets New Deal Job—Talking

Tom Heflin, of Alabama, whose fiery speeches against Al Smith in 1928 deprived him of a seat in the Senate and left him a virtual party outcast, has won his way into the New Deal fold.

The former Senator, whose story-telling propensities made him a Congressional gallery attraction for quarter of a century and leavened many a Chautauqua program, has a job.

He left last night for Atlanta, Ga., where he will begin a stump tour through five States—Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana—as special representative for the Federal Housing Administration.

This time his theme will be "modernization." At the Federal Housing Administration it was said that his present appointment is for only 60 days; that his pay check will be only $400 a month.

Heflin has been a familiar figure around the Capitol for several weeks now. Recently word went around that he was looking for a job—any job. The golden-tongued yarn spinner has met with many reverses since he alienated Democratic backing by his outspoken opposition to the party's 1928 candidate.

Written out of the Democratic Party in 1930 when he ran as an independent for the Senate against the regular Democratic nominee, John H. Bankhead, Heflin refused to call it quits. In 1932 he tried again, this time for the House, in which he spent 16 years of his political youth. He was beaten by Joe Starnes.

Misfortune piled upon misfortune. The last blow came when his son died.

Friends of the jovial Alabaman said that when he made his wants known, his indorsements for a job with the Roosevelt Administration were the most imposing in recent job-seeking annals.

Drive to Oust Long Launched By Democrats

5 Louisiana Congressmen Open Fight to Rid Party of Kingfiish.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, La., July 24.—Five Louisiana Congressmen started a movement today to have Huey Lonk kicked out of the Democratic Party.

They plan to split the Louisiana party into two factions—pro-Long and anti-Long—and probably will let the next Democratic national convention decide which side to recognize.

The Congressmen were aroused to a new assault on the Kingfish by his "vituperative attacks" on President Roosevelt, which they charged were motivated by "political disappointments and baseless delusions of grandeur."

Ignoring Long's position as chairman of the Democratic State central committee, the five Congressmen said "Long can not stand any longer for the principles of the party, and he can rest assured the Democrats of Louisiana will have a full ticket in the field to oppose him in the January primary."

Same Split at Chicago.

The same split occurred before the national party convention in Chicago when President Roosevelt was nominated. Two sets of Louisiana delegates went to the convention—one led by Long and the other by J. Y. Sanders. The Sanders crowd was picked at a "rump" State meeting. Long out-maneuvered them at Chicago, lined up behind the Roosevelt-for-President boom, and got his side recognized.

Now, Long is completely at odds with the Roosevelt Administration. The five Congressmen—Cleveland Dear, J. Y. Sanders, John N. Sandlin, Numa Montet and Riley J. Wilson—have been in conference here three days with anti-Long leaders, working out a plan to deal with the Louisiana dictator, who last week called Mr. Roosevelt "a liar and a faker." They issued a joint statement this evening which said:

"Long does not speak for the people of Louisiana in his attacks on President Roosevelt, as head of the Democratic Party * * * We hazard the prediction that the Roosevelt ticket will sweep the State in January, and end a political regime that has been at once a disgrace and shame to the State and the Nation."

Supporters Are Listed.

The Congressmen were believed to have the support of:

1. The Young Democrats organization.

2. The Roosevelt Clubs, which include most Federal workers.

3. The remnants of Mayor T. S. Walmsley's New Orleans clique which did not "sell out" to Long two weeks ago.

4. Various anti-Long groups, including the militant Square Deal Association, which boasts 70,000 members, "drilled' armed and ready to fight."

Long sprang into the party saddle last year. Escorted by several carloads of his bodyguards and henchmen in high State office, he stormed a meeting of the State Central Committee, ousted the officers and had himself elected chairman.

He has made no attempts to capitalize on this office, and often has said he may run for President himself in 1936, on his "share-the-wealth" ticket. First, though, he plans to run for reelection to the United States Senate at the Democratic primary in January.

Continue in Session.

The Congressmen continued in session tonight. They began gathering here Sunday, two days after Long told the United States Senate "five Louisiana Congressmen whom I elected have sold me out to Roosevelt."

The conference also was hastened by President Roosevelt's announcement that Louisiana, under Long, would get no part of the new Federal relief funds, which meant the loss of $100,000,000 in PWA funds.

"In his speech to the Senate, Long deliberately turned his back on the Democratic Party and sought to deliver Louisiana to Democracy's enemies," the Congressmen's statement read.

"He stands, therefore, a self-confessed traitor to the party that elected him. He openly boasted that he kept PWA money out of the State; he was betrayed the people of his State and shamefully deserted the cause of the working man and woman.

"The dignity of the President's office prevents him from taking notice of Long's vituperative attacks, but the undersigned Congressmen are bound by no such usage or convention. And we unhesitatingly declare Long's assault upon the patriotic leadership and policies of Mr. Roosevelt to be false and malicious and motivated by political disappointments and baseless delusions of grandeur."

Baton Rouge, La., July 24.—The act of the Louisiana Legislature under which the Huey Long State administration assumed control of the East Baton Rouge Parish police jury through the appointment of police jurors, was held unconstitutional today by Judge W. Judge Jones held the act was violative of the provisions of the State constitution providing self-government for the parish, and also that it was defective in that the subject was not included in the call for the special session at which it was passed.

Plan Formed to Revive Basic NRA; New Jobs for Misfits; Lew Douglas Build-Up?

By Raymond Clapper

PROMPTED in part by fears in some business quarters that a wholesale breaking away from NRA business and labor standards may develop after Congress adjourns, if ever, the Administration has a new plan on the fire.

It will provide for suspending anti-trust laws for voluntary groups wishing to formulate codes. Hitherto the general supposition is that when the NRA act was declared unconstitutional, the exemptions from the anti-trust laws carried in the recovery act were wiped out. They were, but Congress reenacted them for purposes limited to labor provisions in the bob-tailed NRA extension act. With that latitude over wages, hours and child labor, plus the authority of the Federal Trade Commission to define fair trade practices, the Administration has decided that within these limits it can revive the basic idea underlying NRA.

Government advisers have placed detailed data in Mr. Roosevelt's hands and an announcement may be expected soon.

President Roosevelt is such a kind-hearted person. He will go to almost any length to take care of one of his lieutenants who is in trouble. Let one of them prove incompetent, throw a fit of temperament and get himself into a fight, or have his throat cut in a factional office quarrel and Mr. Roosevelt will rake over the whole list of 611,752 Federal jobs to find another spot for him.

Several such instances of vocational rehabilitation have attracted attention. When George Peek and Jerome Frank became so furiously entangled in AAA that nobody could do any work, Mr. Roosevelt, with a soothing smile, looked for a cushion to set Peek down on. None of the 611,752 existing jobs would quite fit so Mr. Roosevelt created the post of foreign trade adviser and hitched Peek to it where he has been happily kicking the shins of Secretary of State Hull ever since. Frank, a brilliant lawyer, was berthed in the RFC.

J. Crawford Biggs did not turn out well as solicitor for the Department of Justice and he was given a paying trusteeship under RFC. Same salary, less work.

Now we have the Virgin Island explosion. Gov. Paul Pearson is sidled off pleasantly into a recreation job in PWA. Federal Judge T. Webber Wilson also had to be taken out of the Virgin Islands. His case shows how far the Administration will go in a pinch.

Wilson is a former Mississippi politician, a former Representative who tried for the Senate and lost. The Roosevelt Administration took care of him by sending him to the Virgin Islands as judge. His judicial temperament was inadequate. Critics pictured him as a small-time politician not quite equal to the responsibility of the little Virgin Island jurisdiction. He had to be rescued.

Off-hand no one could think of another job for him. An intensive search began. Finally they discovered the Federal Parole Board. Eureka! It consisted of two Republicans and one Democrat. Better still, one of the Republicans was not only a Hoover appointee but a woman, and a psychiatrist. What business has a woman on a parole board anyway? And a scientist. Anyway, didn't Hoover appoint her? There was just the job for the unemployed Mississippi politician. So they decided to bounce her.

Attorney General Cummings, who is a perfect gentleman in such matters, wrote her a sweet letter, telling her how efficient she had been. He always does those little things well. And the lady departed, naturally somewhat indignant. She has civil service rating, and formerly was a psychiatrist at St. Elizabeths Government Hospital for the Insane.

You'd be surprised how much thought Attorney General Cummings gave to the matter. Long ago he decided that parole board work was not the kind of employment that the Government should give to a lady. That was a man's work. He had this up with the President some time ago, and, would you believe it, he was looking around for the right man to put in there when, providentially, Wilson had got himself in so bad as a judge that he had to be removed. Attorney General Cummings can't for the life of him understand why he didn't think of Wilson before. His director of prisons, Sanford Bates, had given him a list of some 25 names with qualifications for the parole board. But Wilson was the ideal man. So Dr. Amy Stannard turned in her letter of resignation. Let the Hoover crowd get a job for her.

Political Parade: A movie producer is said to be working up a picture with the hero a tall, young, rich and earnest conservative, devoting himself to public service, insisting upon balancing the budget, on keeping down expenditures, and surrounded by laughing politicians who pat him on the back and ignore his advice as they shovel out billions of dollars. Administration people who have heard about it suspect it is a build-up for Lew Douglas, departed budget director and often mentioned as a possible Democratic candidate on a coalition Republican presidential ticket.

Senator La Follette, not Chairman Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee, will lead the fight to reshape the banking bill in the mold desired by the Administration.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes has taken care of the secretary to the late Senator Cutting, Edgar F. Puryear, by making him assistant in charge of new personnel. All that means is that Mr. Puryear is now custodian of 126,000 applications for jobs, all properly signed and sealed with gilt-edge political indorsements—and no jobs. Mr. Puryear has nothing to do now except spend ten hours a day explaining to Senators and Representatives why their constituents can't be given jobs under Ickes.

Madame Perkins is said to be giving the White House more advice than formerly. At least that is one explanation offered for some of the curious events recently . . .

Word has come in that Andrew W. Mellon is very much tempted to peel off several layers of his bankroll in behalf of people who want to run Justice Owen Roberts, of the Supreme Court, for President.

They say that what swung the Administration over in favor of the midget coins was that Mr. Roosevelt wanted to perpetuate the memory of the Hoover Secretary of the Treasury, Ogden Mills, by issuing the smallest coin in American history, worth a tenth of a cent, and naming it for him.

Glass Attacks Plan to Set Up A Central Bank

Opens Senate Debate With Surprise Thrust at Administration Bill.

ing measure, will seek the floor for two hours.

Glass anticipated the Nye attack, and struck first, tactically placing the central bank advocates on the defensive.

"It was at first proposed that the Federal Reserve banks should be stripped of every particle of local self-government, and that we should establish here in Washington practically a central bank to be operated by people who are not bankers and who have no technical knowledge of the banking business," Glass told the Senate.

Cites Wilson's Stand.

"That suggestion was so repugnant to the original purposes and intent of the Federal Reserve banking system that those who propounded the suggestion soon found it convenient to abandon their indefensible attitude."

The Virginian said Woodrow Wilson was elected President upon a platform that declared unmistakably against "the Aldrich plan or any other plan for a central bank." He said Theodore Roosevelt's platform in 1912 likewise denounced the Aldrich plan of centralization.

"Instead of a central banking system, Congress decided to create a regional reserve banking system upon the theory that the respective regions established would know better how to manage their own credit and respond to the requirements of their own people than any central bank established either in New York or Washington," he went on.

Called Repugnant.

"Therefore we established a regional reserve system, with a large measure of local authority and a Federal Reserve Board charged not with conducting a central bank system, but merely with supervisory power to see that these regional reserve banks complied with the law.

"When the suggestion practically of a central bank here in Washington was abandoned because of its obvious repugnance to everything we have done, then it was proposed that the central board here should be given extraordinary authority to control these regional banks."

Glass added that "to say that the regional banks supplying all the funds of the Federal Reserve system should be completely controlled by a central board, set up originally as a supervisory power of control, is to me the most unreasonable thing that could be suggested."

Despite the approaching conflict over the Glass modifications in the centralized credit and banking features of the Administration bill, Senate leaders last night expressed hope for passage late this week or early next.

Calls for Board of 12.

Glass told the Senate it had been necessary to "make concessions—even concessions of convictions"—to bring the Senate Banking Committee together on the bill's controversial Title 2.

Reorganizing Reserve Board control over the Nation's credit, Title 2 of the bill reported by Senator Glass would eliminate the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency from the Federal Reserve Board. A reconstituted board of seven members, appointed by the President, would sit with five representatives of the Federal Reserve Banks as an open-market committee to control Reserve Bank buying and selling of Government bonds.

As against this, the House bill would have made the Federal Reserve Board the open-market committee, with five representatives of the Reserve banks serving only in a minority capacity.

Digging into Federal Reserve history, Glass asserted that the original purposes of the open-market committee were to enforce rediscount rates of Federal Reserve banks in their own districts and to enable the Federal Reserve Bank to use its surplus funds to insure overhead expenses, "and that was all."

He said:

"It never was intended that the open-market committee should speculate in United States bonds or any other securities. It was intended that the open-market committee should build up a market for commercial paper, for eligible paper, based upon industry and commerce.

"It never was intended that the open-market committee should go into the market and speculate. I do not think they ever bought a dollar of commercial paper. They ought to have created a market for commercial paper. But they have $2,500,000,000 of Government bonds in their portfolio and they have not any use for a dollar of them and they cannot sell a dollar of them without demoralizing the entire securities market of the United States. Some of us thought it would be perfect folly to interfere with the existing arrangement. Then it was proposed that the Federal Reserve Board should be constituted the open-market committee for the system."

Touching briefly on the market crash of 1929, Glass called attention to statements "that the Federal Reserve banks failed in a great exigency to put a stop to wild speculation."

"As a matter of fact," he said, "it was the Federal Reserve Board that failed. For seven successive weeks the New York Federal Reserve Bank proposed a raise in its discount rate, and for seven successive weeks the Federal Reserve Board here at Washington refused to sanction the raise in its discount rate.

Failed to Curb Money.

"The purpose of raising the discount rate was largely psychological. It was to put speculators and gamblers on the stock market upon notice that money was no longer to be easy, and that if the first raise of the rediscount rate did not put a stop to it there would be successive raises of the discount rate in order that these gamblers might not have easy access to the facilities of the Reserve banks and of the member banks of the country.

"Yet we were proposing to entrust to the Federal Reserve Board, which failed utterly, the very power that it is complained that the Federal Reserve banks did not exercise. * * * They did exercise it in 1929; and even at that late date the Federal Reserve Board would not sanction their action, but let them go on upon a cheap money basis until the crash came."

Glass said he agreed "measurably" with the Federal Reserve Board "defense" that at the time discount rates did not count; "that when a fellow was gambling and expected to make 50 per cent or 150 per cent or 200 per cent, he was not to be deterred by a raise of 1, or 2, or 3 per cent in the discount rate.

"But at any rate," he continued, "it seems to me literally absurd to be charging the offending board with the power to do what it utterly failed to do in any measure in 1927, 1928 and 1929."

Glass said elimination of the Secretary of the Treasury from board membership was incorporated in the bill because it was urged "that he exercises undue influence over the board, that he treats it rather as a bureau of the Treasury instead of being an independent board * * * designed to respond primarily and altogether to the requirements of business and industry and agriculture, and not to be used to finance the Federal Government, which was assumed always to be able to finance itself."

While Secretary of the Treasury, Glass said he always "dominated the activities of the board, and I always directed them in the interest of the Treasury, and so did my predecessor, Mr. McAdoo."

Agency to Rule Liquor Industry Voted in House

Senate Expected to Speed Plan Creating a New U. S. Alcohol Unit.

By the Associated Press.

Legislation to establish permanent Federal control of the post-repeal liquor business was sped to the Senate yesterday by a 229-to-100 house vote.

It would create within the Treasury a new agency to be known as the Federal Alcohol Administration. The measure was requested by President Roosevelt to replace the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, killed by the Supreme Court's NRA decision.

But contrary to Administration wishes, the House bill would make the new agency a division of the Treasury instead of an independent office.

Early Senate consideration of the measure was forecast by Democratic leaders. Administration spokesmen were expected to wage a determined fight in that chamber to make the new FAA independent and to write into law the old FACA requirement that liquor be sold retail in bottles only. Secretary Morgenthau has said an army of enforcement agents would be required to combat bootlegging if keg sales of distilled liquors were permitted.

House debate centered on this question. A ways and means committee compromise permitting only bona fide hotels and clubs to buy liquor in wooden containers and resell to their patrons was supported by the House, 86 to 81.

The cooperate interests, led by Representative Fuller (Democrat), Arkansas, wanted to have general cask or barrel sale. Representative Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, led the nonpartisan floor fight against the hotel-club compromise as discriminatory against inns and restaurants. But proponents of the exemptions contended they were to head off bootlegging and to avoid pre-prohibition saloons.

Midwestern members also fought to insert a prohibition against manufacture in the United States of alcohol from imported molasses. Representative Bacharach (Republican), New Jersey, moved to send the bill back to committee for inclusion of that amendment and to put all employes of the new agency under civil service. The motion lost on a record vote, 209 to 122.

The bill, as passed by the House, requires everyone in the industry, except retailers and brewers, to have Federal permits, outlaws interlocking directorates and tie-ups between manufacturers and retailers and bans various unfair practices. A provision to levy a $10 occupational tax on permittees was eliminated.

Holding Parley Split Over Two Roosevelt Aids

on the House floor during consideration of the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, and O'Connor's press release stated he "has issued several scathing attacks against the Administration and the President."

Huddleston explained his objection to the presence of the Administration aids at the utility bill conference on the ground that the parley should be executive and that it would be impossible for conferees to reach a fair agreement with the President's spokesmen on hand.

He told Senator Wheeler that the conference should exclude all parties save the conferees or else be thrown wide open with newspaper reporters and others welcome.

De Vane and Cohen are charged by House members with practically writing the Senate version of the Wheeler-Rayburn bill and with dictating the Senate report indorsing the controversial "death sentence." They are also accused of writing speeches for Representatives in support of the bill.

The two attorneys likewise had a prominent hand in drafting of the stock exchange and securities bills and sat in the conferences, House members said. No issue was raised against them at that time, however.

Huddleston belittled the published estimate of Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, that lobby investigation disclosure had persuaded 35 members of the House to switch to favor the "death sentence."

The names of most of the Texas congressional delegation were brought into the Senate inquiry during the morning as Carpenter admitted he had talked with most of them, including Chairman Rayburn of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, at one time or another. Only Representative Maverick and McFarlane were excluded for an unexplained reason.

After Senator Black had introduced the name of Col. Carl L. Estes, Longview, Tex., newspaper publisher, into the hearing by suggesting that Carpenter had talked to him about the utility bill, Col. Estes issued a statement at Dallas in which he said, in part:

"If somebody would take the trouble to investigate Congressman Black it might be possible that the name of Fairbanks-Morse would come in. That company has spent several thousands of dollars, I am informed, for propaganda purposes in Texas, looking to the building of municipal power plants, powered with their equipment."

Estes said at the time the Wheeler-Rayburn bill was under consideration he was in Washington "lobbying at my own expense against another piece of crazy legislation put forward by Black, Roosevelt and that crowd of Utopia envisionists—the Thomas Federal oil control bill."

If Black insists "on dragging my name into the investigation," he added, "I will go down to Washington and black his eye with my fist, for it is high time somebody put that gang of Socialists in their place."

The Senate committee learned from Carpenter that the Texas Power & Light Co. spent $33,777 fighting the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, exclusive of salaries and of an unknown certain amount contributed to the Edison Electric Institute. He admitted that the expense was charged to the operating account and eventually would have to be paid for by the company's consumers.

He admitted paying $192 to Peter Molyneau, editor of the Texas Weekly, for broadcasts opposing the bill. In addition, the Texas Power & Light Co. advertised in the publication.

Carpenter left the stand with an admonition from Senator Black to "refresh your recollection as to your whereabouts and activities" on the Sunday immediately before the vote on the "death sentence" and to be prepared to testify more fully today.

Perjury Charge May Be Faced By Silverman

Lawyer Tells Army Probe of Funds Supplied to Missing Witness.

By the Associated Press.

Through a youthful New York attorney, the House Military Committee yesterday laid the basis for what was described as a possible perjury charge involving Joseph Silverman, jr., dealer in excess Army supplies.

It received a blunt statement from Harold Schnuer that Silverman had supplied money several times to Frank Speicher, a missing witness for a grand jury investigation here last year into War Department contracts. The committee has just renewed a similar investigation of its own.

Contradicts Story.

In contradiction to previous testimony of Silverman, Schnuer, who acted as Speicher's attorney, said "it was arranged between Silverman and Speicher that money would be given Speicher so he could carry on in New York."

He told, too, how he obtained the money—100 bills in small blue envelopes—five or six times at the office of Thomas Jefferson Ryan, another New York lawyer, and that arrangements for the transactions were made with Nate Silverman, brother of Joseph.

Schnuer described as "absolutely untrue" Silverman's assertion to the committee that the money was in payment for information to be turned over to the Military Committee.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, said after the hearing that charges of perjury and obstruction of justice were a distinct possibility as a result of the conflicting testimony.

Grand Jury Probe Seen.

Pencilling notes on a pad of paper, George E. McNeill, representing the local United States district attorney, listened attentively to the proceedings. His presence gave rise to speculation as to the possibility of another grand jury inquiry into War Department affairs and Silverman's buying and selling of excess Army goods.

Silverman has been barred from dealing with the department.

Ryan told the committee last week that he had acted in the matter "at the request of A. Mitchell Palmer and Silverman." Palmer, former Attorney General and attorney for the merchandize, sent the committee a letter denying that he had any connection with the payments.

Every day, Schnuer asserted, Joseph Silverman told Speicher by telephone that he was arranging for Speicher to appear in Washington.

"Yet all the time," McSwain interposed, "he was arranging for money for Speicher to stay away."

Accepting that statement, Schnuer said the talk of arrangements was "probably all a lie." He said Silverman told his client that it was "not the proper time" for Speicher to show up as it would be "foolish and might start a great deal of trouble."

Actually, he said, he thought Silverman was avoiding Speicher.

Schnuer also described as "untrue" testimony given the committee last year by Nate Silverman that he did not know of any Silverman money paid Speicher while the latter was sought by Justice Department agents.

Move to Release Scaffa Weighed

Court Hears of Jewelry in Peregrinations.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 24.—After a court session in which the peregrinations of a fortune in stolen jewelry were related, Federal Judge Carroll C. Hincks tonight pondered a motion to dismiss perjury charges against Noel Scaffa, America's No. 1 jewel sleuth, who recovered the jewels for a fat commission.

Scaffa is charged by the Government with giving the Federal grand jury a wrong impression of his activities last winter in the recovery of $185,000 worth of diamonds, pearls and emeralds stolen from Mrs. Margaret Hawksworth Bell in a Miami hotel.

The Government's two witnesses today—Henry L. Glidden, American representative of Lloyds of London, and Thomas Edward Crowley, an agent of Glidden's firm—testified to Scaffa's lavish use of money in the jewel hunt, and the transportation of Mrs. Bell's gems to various cities long before they were reported found.

It is the Government's contention that Scaffa told the grand jury he did not know the jewels were transported in interstate commerce, and that it has proof he did know it.

Yale Graduate Held For Frauds by Mail

New York, July 24 (AP).—Wallace G. Garland was held in $5,000 bail by United State Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter, despite the Government's request for a $20,000 bond. Mason previously was arraigned.

Paving Blocks Switched For Munitions at Sea

Paris, July 24 (AP).—A substitution of sand paving blocks for 27 tons of munitions, bound from France to Argentina, was made after the ship left the port of Rouen, investigators said today.

The substitution was discovered when the shipment, embargoed by the Argentine government, was inspected upon its return at Havre. The investigators are considering the possibility that the arms were transferred clandestinely at a French port and trans-shipped to Ethiopia.

She Resigned to Give Him a Job

Underwood & Underwood.

Dr. Amy Stannard, who resigned from the United States Board of Parole by request, to make a job for Federal Judge T. Webber Wilson, shown with her, who was shifted from his bench in the Virgin Islands by the President in order to settle the political row there.

President named Pearson's chief aid as his successor.

New Regime Needed.

Committee members said they believed that the entire Pearson regime in the Virgin Islands, center of violent controversy for several years, should be liquidated and that a new set of administrators should be sent there. When informed by the President that Pearson and Cramer recently had not been on friendly terms, the committeemen were taken back.

But they told the President that they thought a rigid inquiry into Cramer's work in the islands and his relationship, if any, to the various political intrigues which caused dissension both there and here should be fully aired. The President is said to have agreed with them. Thus Cramer must justify himself before the committee before his nomination will be confirmed by the Senate.

Police Force Denied.

Shortly before the senatorial group visited the President, an effort to appropriate $40,000 for establishment of a constabulary to keep peace in the Virgin Islands was overwhelmingly voted down after Tydings angrily denounced the proposal. The origin of the proposal was veiled in mystery, but there were hints that it was inspired by the Interior Department, which has jurisdiction over the islands.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, proposed appropriating $40,000 for a Virgin Island constabulary as an amendment to the second deficiency appropriation bill when it was being considered by the Senate yesterday.

When he heard of McKellar's proposal, Tydings rushed from the cloakroom to the Senate floor. Contending that the Virgin Islanders were "a peaceful people," the Marylander asserted that "such action would cause resentment" and that "you would have the Army and Navy down there before you finished."

Those who accompanied Tydings to the White House were Senators William H. King (Democrat), of Utah; Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina; Jesse H. Metcalf (Republican), of Rhode Island, and Ernest W. Gibson (Republican), of Vermont.

Policy Is Discussed.

The Marylander said the committee wished to ascertain the Administration's plans regarding the Virgin Islands and to learn what was expected of the committee. He said the committee was interested only "in future policy."

Out of its investigation would come, he said, proposals for a wider spread of suffrage, more equitable taxation, better administration of justice and economic stability so that the Federal Government might be relieved of all or part of the $200,000 annual deficit which it now pays for the islands.

Asked whether the committee was opposed to Cramer, the chairman replied that none on the committee knew enough about him to be in a position to say whether he was satisfactory or unsatisfactory. He said the committee was not concerned what department had jurisdiction of the islands, in reply to a question as to whether the possession might be transferred back to the Navy Department.

Meanwhile, from St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands, the Associated Press reported that Cramer's selection had caused surprise and that his appointment would be protested. It was asserted that some of the islanders had been led to believe that Admiral William V. Pratt, former chief of Naval Operations, now retired, would be appointed as Governor.

Justice Aids Silent.

Justice Department attaches declined to discuss the forced resignation of Dr. Stannard to create a vacancy for Wilson. It was learned, however, that ousting of Dr. Stannard to permit appointment of a man in her place had been considered long before the Virgin Islands situation reached the point of a heated controversy. The Attorney General, it was learned, did not believe a post on the Parole Board was a proper one for a woman.

Cummings took the view that since only 5 per cent of Federal prisoners were women and the work of passing on parole applications had to be distributed among the board members, it was necessary that Dr. Stannard had to deal with many male cases involving reprehensible crimes, both to her embarrassment and that of the other board members.

Republican Board.

Another consideration believed to have inspired Dr. Stannard's removal was that she is a Republican. The Parole Board is controlled by Republicans, named by former President Hoover, and it is known that the Administration has been anxious to place a Democratic majority on the board.

Dr. Stannard was recommended for appointment to the board by Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, a Government institution for treatment of mental diseases, where she was admissions officer. She is regarded as an expert on abnormal criminal behavior and has had long experience in research and case records in psychiatry.

In reply to Dr. Stannard's letter of resignation complying with his request, Cummings wrote her as follows:

"I am sincerely appreciative of your generous letter in which you submit your resignation as a member of the United States Board of Parole.

"You have discharged your duties with intelligence, devotion and fidelity. In accepting your resignation, I tender to you the thanks of the Department of Justice for the distinguished service you have rendered in a highly important post and my best wishes for your success and happiness in the practice of your profession."

Miura said the gunboat Hira, which fired the shots, was engaged in target practice.

House Victory In '36 Consensn Of Democrats

Confidence Voiced by Members Canvassed, Declares Drery.

By the Associated Press.

A private sounding by the Democratic congressional campaign committee brought reports yesterday that despite some weak spots, most Democratic members believed another party victory was in the offing.

Representative Drewry (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the campaign committee, said he had received more than a hundred replies from a letter he sent Democratic Representatives recently asking their views on prospects for a Democratic victory with particular regard to their ownd istrict.

"There were a few who reported conditions were not so favorable in their district," he said, "but these were far in the minority. Most members felt there would be another Democratic victory next year.

"Helping Some Now."

"I just asked them as chairman of the campaign committee if there was anything they could suggest that we might be able to do for them in their district in view of the coming campaign.

"We are helping some of them now. Quite a few made suggestions of ways that we might help them.

"The only question of a general nature that I asked them was whether conditions looked favorable to a Democratic victory next year in their district."

Makes Plea for Negroes.

Meanwhile, Perry W. Howard, Negro Republican national committeeman from Mississippi, yesterday urged his colleagues to "kindly keep the colored electorate in mind" in choosing a 1936 presidentail nominee.

In a letter to Chairman Henry P. Fletcher and members of the committee, Howard asserted that President Roosevelt "not only has failed the country but has failed the Negro in that he has done nothing that he promised to do."

He urged nomination of a candidate "whose estimate of a citizen is not his color but his character and ability."

Trade Group Sponsors Crippled Children Fete

The board has issued invitations to all such children of whom it knows, and has requested that one grown-up accompany each child, but if any that have not been asked wish to join the party all they need do is to telephone Loren Cluster at National 0624 and he will arrange transportation to and from the boat for them.

The children will gather at the Wilson Line pier at 2 p. m., August 2. They will board the City of Washington for a ride down the river and back. Ice cream and cake as well as entertainment by the Fox Theater Boys Band will be furnished. The party will return by 5 p. m.

AAA Chiefs Explode Over Hog-Raising Ad

By the Associated Press.

Theri nerves already frayed by weeks of court and legislative troubles, Farm Administration officials figuratively exploded yesterday when they saw a classified advertisement published Sunday in the Joplin, Mo., Globe.

In the midst of several ads offering real estate for sale, they read:

"Dandy way to make money; buy this 13 acres for hog raising. Sign up with the Government to not raise, say 500 hogs. It will pay you $1,000. That will pay for the farm and have some left."

Chester C. Davis, AAA's outspoken boss, quickly denied the AAA was promoting a real estate move in Missouri or elsewhere.

"It's preposterous, it's at least preliminary to fraud. It's a deliberate misrepresentation and not in any way possible," Davis sputtered. "I shall begin an investigation at once."

'Television Cable' Gets Commission O

Experimental Chain Will Link Phila. and N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

The communications commission yesterday authorized the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the New York Telephone Co. to install an experimental "coaxial" cable between New York and Philadelphia to determine its possibilities for the future broadcasting of television.

The commission's order said the companies must allow others interested in the transmission of television service to have access to the cable for similar experiments, provided both sides agree on terms. If such an agreement can not be reached, the other parties may apply to the commission to intervene and establish the terms.

Installation of the cable will cost in excess of $500,000. The A. T. & T. expects to experiment with it, the commission was told, in order to make it available for future public use either for transmitting telephone and telegraph messages or television.

'Midget Coin' Plan Opposed on Hill

By the Associated Press.

The chairman of the House coinage Committee, Representative Somers (Democrat), of New York, yesterday expressed opposition to the idea of permitting the coinage of new mill pieces.

He said, however, that before reaching a final decision on whether the minting of new hal-cent coins should be authorized, he would call his committee together to hear a representative of the Treasury.

The committee, he said, will meet late this week or early next week to consider the plan, advanced by Secretary Morgenthau as one wihch would help States with sales taxes requiring the payment of fractions of a cent.

Officials Plan Defenses For Processing Tax

Government to Ask Suits to Outlaw Collection Be Dismissed.

By the Associated Press.

Expecting the AAA amendments to go to a Senate-House conference next week, Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, yesterday announced plans for a meeting to determine the course of action on pending processing tax suits.

Davis said representatives of the Justice Department, the Farm Administration and the Bureau of Internal Revenue will meet "soon."

It was indicated that the Government will ask dismissal of suits to restrain collection of processing taxes. A total of 440 of these were said to be pending, with about 50 temporary restraining orders granted.

Davis predicted "many dismissals" of these suits, but at the same time expressed hope that the Supreme Court would rule upon constitutionality of both the original adjustment act and the amendments "as soon as possible." He said he believed that validity of both might be decided in one test case.

Conceding that processing tax collections have declined sharply since the suits were filed, Davis said he believed this not serious and that the taxes eventusily would be paid.

Davis said the amendments "went through the Senate in fine shape."

Meanwhile, Representative Jones (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the House Agricultural Committee, said as soon as the amendments are received from the Senate, probably today or tomorrow, he will ask the House to disagree with Senate changes.

Jones said he will ask for a conference.

Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Agricultural Committee, predicted that there would be little difficulty in reaching an agreement, and said he believed the bill would be approved finally in substantially the same form as passed by the Senate.

Nazis in N. Y. Protest Action By LaGuardia

Brooklynites Flail Mayor for Denying German Masseur Right to Work.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 24.—Brooklyn Nazis boiled into a protest tonight against what their spokesmen called an "anti-German" action by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia.

Speakers at a mass meeting called by the Friends of the New Germany, a pro-Nazi organization, assailed the mayor for his refusal to recognize a commercial treaty placing German citizens on an equal footing with Americans in the professional fields.

Throughout the day the fiery, desk-thumping mayor stood solidly behind his license commissioner, Paul Moss, in the latter's refusal to permit a German alien massage operator to pursue his vocation in New York.

Alleged Discrimination.

Taking the position that it was "well known" that American Jews had been discriminated against in Germany, LaGuardia said:

"The commercial treaty between Germany and this country has no force or effect because Germany does not respect the reciprocal rights of American citizens."

He referred to the treaty of October 14, 1925, which gives German citizens equal rights with Americans in "professional, scientific, religious and philanthropic work." The treaty is due to expire in October, but a new agreement to extend it is awaiting Senate approval.

Although the German consulate in New York had demanded that a license be issued to the masseur, whose name was withheld, the State Department in Washington said it had not been requested by the German Embassy thus far to look into the situation.

Declining to name the masseur, Mayor LaGuardia contended that "we're not dealing in personalities."

"This is a broad interpretation of treaty rights," he said. "This is something big we're fighting. The issue is, should we extend privileges to German citizens when similar privileges are denied American citizens in Germany?"

Terms Mayor "Pretty Dumb."

Joseph Schuster, acting leader of the Friends of the New Germany, characterized the mayor's attitude as "pretty dumb" and suggested that "perhaps the 600,000 or 700,000 Germans in the city aren't good enough for him."

Consul Gustave A. Muller refused to discuss the case, but German officials were represented as holding to the view that there has been no discrimination among American citizens, Jewish or otherwise, in Germany.

Report Il Duce Will Send 500,000 Men to Africa

By the Associated Press.

London, July 24.—Information that Premier Mussolini intends to send 500,000 troops into East Africa against Ethiopia was said tonight by an authoritative British source to be in the hands of several foreign governments.

In giving out this information the source concerned said Italy intended to move sufficient troops into East Africa in the next six weeks to make up that total number before the rainy season ends.

Loan Moves Balked.

The Ethiopian government was said to be endeavoring to arrange credits in London with which to pay for war material, although it was asserted there has been no move to obtain an official loan. Well-informed sources said thus far the Ethiopians had achieved no success whatever, trading concerns refusing credit and demanding cash and banking interests refusing both credit and cash.

Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade, told the House of Commons the British government was treating Italy and Ethiopia alike on the question of arms sales, had not granted export licenses to either for the last four months and "there had been no application from Ethiopia for arms in the last four months."

It was anounced the cabinet would make no decision on arms exports until shortly before Anthony Eden, minister for League of Nations affairs, goes to Geneva next week.

Italian Press Berates England on Arms Sales

By the United Press.

Rome, July 24.—Angry Italians today threatened revenge if Britain sells arms and ammunition to Ethiopia.

"Who knows but that the day will come when we shall be able to repay dearly for each bullet and shell now being sold to Emperor Haile Selassie?" La Stampa of Turin, important Fascist newspaper, asked in a bitter first-page editorial.

"The war supplies are being sold to Ethiopia to kill Italians. Business is business, Messrs. Englishmen!"

Simultaneously the government decreed development of the world's greatest group of citizen soldiers. Orders for training the classes of 1915, 1916 and 1917 will swell to 1,700,000 the youths, exclusive of men, preparing for service with the colors.

Premier Benito Mussolini's statements of his East African policies aroused country-wide enthusiasm.

Demonstrations were reported from Florence, Palermo, Messina, Padua, Naples, Cicenza, Foggia and other cities. Throngs at Naples saluted troops departing for East African aboard the transport Praga. The ship carried three field hospital staffs and combat forces.

Il Duce appointed his son Vittorio a lieutenant in the air force. His son Bruno, youngest licensed pilot in Italy, was made a sergeant. Both volunteered for East African service.

The government approved action of the Italian minister to Ethiopia in refusing to attend Emperor Haile Selassie's birthday celebration.

as peasants in Tamaulipas State continued their bloodless fight to oust Gov. Rafael Villarreal.

Several thousand students hanged Garrido in effigy on one of the capital's principal avenues this afternoon in token of the anti-church leader's downfall. Garrido's power was broken when President Lazaro Cardenas intervened to remove his protege, Gov. Miguel Lastra.

Bells of the Mexico City Cathedral, oldest in America, rang out for the first time in many years as the students, after hanging the effigy, paraded to the cathedral in continuation of their celebration.

Order Reported in Tabasco.

Meanwhile, reports to the war department said complete order prevailed in Tabasco, which was placed under semimilitary control after Gen. Miguel Henriquez, known to be loyal to the federal government, took over Tabasco as military commander.

Agitation continued, however, in Tamaulipas, where peasants rising peacefully yesterday overthrew municipal councils in 22 towns and forced 14 others to withdraw their recognition of Villarreal as governor.

Reports from Ciudad Victoria, the capital, said an estimated 6,000 agrarians were massed there demanding Villarreal's resignation. The governor hurried to Tampico to confer with Secretary of the Interior Barba Gonzalez, who flew from the capital to investigate the situation on behalf of President Cardenas.

Violent action by the peasants appeared threatened at Matamoros and other Tamaulipas towns, but persons conversant with the state situation said they did not believe Villarreal could be overthrown by violence. They expressed belief President Cardenas would ask the federal Congress to remove him after Barba Gonzalez' return from Tampico.

At Tampico the interior secretary conferred with representatives of thousands of workers and peasants who asked Villarreal's removal, asserting he was "guilty of numerous crimes and immoralities."

The Tampico municipal council also asked that he be ousted on the grounds it was unable to work with him.

Belief that Villarreal's days were numbered was strengthened by reports that Emilio Portes Gil, president of the National Revolutionary (Government) Party, was backing the movement against him. However, the governor said over the telephone that he would be able to "dominate the situation," and declared 600,000 supporters were ready to defend him "with blood and fire."

Revolt No Surprise, Says Former President

By the Associated Press.

San Diego, Calif., July 24.—Abelardo Rodriguez, former President of Mexico, indicated no surprise today at the uprising of the Agrarians, or Peasant Party, in the State of Tamaulipas. Rodriguez is at his ranch home near Ensenada.

"The working and peasant classes have been overtaxed for some time," Rodriguez said. "Conditions have been deplorable and I have been expecting trouble. My hope is that there will be no serious casualties from the present trouble and that the government of Mexico will not suffer as a result of the conditions.

The anti-Semitic wave supplied a section of the provincial press a welcome opportunity to renew the general attack on department stores, regardless of whether they were Gentile or Jewish-owned.

Thus the National Blatt at Coblenz observed:

"Our principles regarding department stores remain adamant, as do our other principles. We are still fighting this institution, refraining from overt action for the present only for social reasons."

Body of Salesman Is Sent to Philadelphia.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., July 23.—Identified by his wife, the body of Fred G. Martsolf, a Philadelphia securities salesman, was taken to Philadelphia yesterday from McConnellsburg, where it had been held since it was found Sunday in the mountains.

Martsolf had committed suicide, Sheriff Roy M. Sipes of Fulton County said, by extending hose from the exhaust pipe of his car to the tightly sealed interior. He apparently had seated himself to await death after writing a note in which he said his act was prompted by love for his wife. He had been dead for more than two months.

Mrs. Martsolf said she last saw her husband alive May 16. Financial trouble and worry over deaths in the family were advanced as possible motive.

New Fingerprint Plan Traps Man

Maryland's Bureau Pays Its First Dividend.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 24.—The new fingerprint system installed by the State police has paid its first dividends in a criminal case, Detective Sergt. Harvey R. Baker, of the State police force, said today.

Confronted with fingerprint evidence against him, a suspect in an Annapolis burglary case confessed to the charge, Sergt. Baker said. The prisoner is Clarence Forrester, held in the Anne Arundel County jail on a burglary charge.

State police fingerprint experts were called to Annapolis after a recent burglary near the city and found fingerprints on the wall of the looted house. The prints were compared with those of several suspects and were found to match Forrester's, Baker said.

BOYS WILL BE MEN

. . . what SORT of men?

WHERE will you go from here . . . boys?

TO COLLEGE, perhaps, after your high school work is done . . . to learn to be a doctor, lawyer, merchant, engineer. But if your family can not afford to send you to college, you'll go out into the world alone and be thankful for any job you can get, at first.

AND THE WORLD won't be your oyster. You'll be buffeted around, discouraged . . . know dark moments when you'll be tempted to throw it all over, to give up the struggle.

YOU WON'T give up, though . . . you'll get on—better than the others, probably. Because you already know a good many things that lots of young fellows miss altogether. Higher education? There's more to higher education than Greek, philosophy and fine art . . . there's a different kind of higher education that's even more worth while.

AS A Post Carrier Salesman, you've absorbed things that college doesn't always give you. Honesty, for example . . . and courage, courtesy, salesmanship, system. You've discovered that the way to make a living is to work for it . . . and that you'll always get what you give—no more, no less.

YOU'VE been out and around, and talked with a lot of people, and kept your accounts straight. Keep on doing your work faithfully and well . . . learn all you can from it. Higher education? These things are all higher education . . . and they're yours to keep and to use forever.

New Lighting Adds to Beauty Of Arlington

John Paul Jones One of Candidates to Speak at Meeting.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 800. Clarendon, Va.

Modern street lights carrying 250-candlepower were turned on at 8:30 o'clock last night by the Virginia Public Service Co. through the business section of Clarendon. The lights extend from Virginia to Clarendon avenues.

For several years efforts have been made by the business interests of Clarendon to have the county provide better street lights and again this year the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce in co-operation with the Clarendon Business Men's Association requested better lights.

According to County Manager Roy S. Braden, these lights are being installed on trial and if proven satisfactory they will remain.

This is, he stated, but the beginning of a movement to provide a better street lighting system over the entire county.

Sheriff Howard B. Fields, of Arlington County, and his opponent in the primary, H. J. Odenthal, clashed over the issue of crime as they spoke Tuesday night at a political rally held at the Washington-Lee High School.

Odenthal renewed his attack on Fields' alleged failure to stop operation of slot machines in the county, saying that the sheriff knows they are used as gambling devices. He also said that he would reorganize the police department along modern lines if he is elected.

To the crime charges, Fields replied with that if Odenthal knows where crimes are being committed, he should go to the courthouse and swear out warrants. Fields said he was running "as a life-long Democrat, not as a two-year Democrat."

Emery N. Hosmer, candidate for Commonwealth's attorney, said: "I am fighting for this nomination on issues as I see them, and one of the first I raised was the closing of dumps in the county."

The present incumbent seeking reelection, Lawrence W. Douglas, defended his record of the past 3½ years.

Another candidate for the post, John Paul Jones, said: "I want this office. I am making no campaign promises. My only pledge is that I will serve you as no one ever has."

In replying to a challenge by Douglas to point out one case, criminal or civil, not conducted properly, Jones declared that the fee of $750 which went to Douglas, in the suit of the county to recover the Duncan bond, was not proper.

"I claim," said Jones, "that he was no more entitled to that fee than any man or woman in this audience, because his salary covers both criminal and civil cases.

Other speakers were C. B. Laycock, Ralph E. Remington, Chance Buchanan and Lyman M. Kelley, candidates for county clerk, and County Treasurer Charles T. Jesse and his opponent, Harry A. Fellows.

The Arlington County Republican Club meeting last night at Powhatan Springs Lodge adopted resolutions to the effect that there will be a Republican convention after the Democratic primary to be held August 6. At this convention candidates will be selected for the several county offices.

It is further suggested in the resolution that the Democrats are soliciting votes regardless of party in the coming primary and that the Republicans entering the primary are told that by having participated in the primary that they are honor-bound to support the winning candidates.

All Republicans in the county are urged to refuse to vote in the Democratic primary.

Mrs. Margerye W. Prytherch has been appointed as chairman of the publicity committee. Other members are Horace Woodward and Carl Marshall.

The Lyon Park Citizens Association will sponsor a political rally tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Community House.

Speakers will be Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas and his two opponents, John Paul Jones and Emery N. Hosmer, and Lyman M. Kelley, Ralph E. Remington, Chance Buchanan and C. B. Laycock for county clerk.

A straw vote on candidates for the county offices is to be one of the outstanding features of the hospital lawn festival to be held at Lyon Park next Wednesday night, according to an announcement last night by Mrs. Joseph Haley, general chairman.

The festival is being sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Arlington Hospital Association, to raise funds toward the erection of a hospital in Arlington County. A large attendance is anticipated and it is estimated that more than 1,000 votes will be cast.

All persons who have announced for county office, whether in the Democratic primary or as independents, will be eligible to have their names placed upon the ballot. Ballots will be counted by a committee from the auxiliary and results made public at conclusion of the festival.

Taxpayer Drops Suit Against Montgomery County Officials

Court Action Was Protest Against Pay Increase While in Office.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

The taxpayers' suit filed by James P. B. Veirs prior to the November election in Montgomery County Circuit Court against County Commissioners John B. Diamond and Robert D. Hagner was dropped yesterday by Veirs.

A line directing the clerk of court to dismiss the proceedings was filed by Ralph S. Fowler, attorney for Veirs.

The suit alleged that Hagner and Diamond had been paid $1,900 each increased salary in violation of the constitution of Maryland, in that they were in office when the pay increase was authorized by the Legislature. The constitution provides that no elected officer may receive a raise in salary while in office.

The salaries of the two commissioners were retained by the county treasurer until the full amount had been impounded in the case of Hagner, and until Diamond went out of office.

Dropping of the suit will permit reimbursing of the two commissioners and will remove a threat of a property lien against Diamond.

Reorganization of the Young Republican Club of Montgomery County and plans for the 1936 election campaign were discussed at a meeting of the club Tuesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Edgemoor, Md.

The club is to be reorganized and new officers elected at a meeting planned for August 19. The club will begin preparations for the election campaign at once.

County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan explained the increase of 60 cents in the county tax rate at the meeting. He declared the levy was necessary because of increased school and police needs and in order that the bonded indebtedness of the county could be met as due.

Wilton T. Allen, secretary of the Republican State central committee, urged the necessity for beginning preparations for the election and early organization of the working committees.

Mrs. Tuckerman pointed out reasons why the young people of the county should take interest in national politics as well as local.

Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the Republican State central committee for the county and president of the club, presided.

The mayor and council of Takoma Park, Md., today will publish announcement of a public hearing August 19 at 8 p. m. in the town firehouse and community center on a proposed construction of pavement and curbing for Valley View avenue at a cost of approximately $12 a linear foot.

H. K. Hobart, owner of a subdivision at the end of the avenue, will dedicate the necessary right of way to connect the avenue to Willow avenue.

Backers of the movement to have the center of Wisconsin avenue paved between the District line and the Old Georgetown road in the town of Bethesda received another indorsement this week when the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce went on record in favor of this treatment of the street.

The center paving is advocated as an alternate to establishing a parkway in the center of the street as soon as the street railway car tracks are abandoned. The two outside strips of the avenue are now being widened and paved by the Maryland State roads commission.

The Bethesda chamber also voted to join with other western Maryland civic organizatoins in a campaign to prevent any diversion of traffic to Gettysburg by way of a new highway. The aim of this campaign, according to the board of directors of the chamber, is to insure the adoption of the Rockville pike route for the proposed new Gettysburg memorial highway in preference to any new route.

The Bethesda chamber will be represented in this campaign by Past President Samuel E. Stonebraker, J. Harry Welch and A. R. Townshend, jr.

Elliott Named Fire Unit Head At Falls Church

Clyde Donaldson Succeeds O. C. Pearson as Chief of Volunteers.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Benjamin F. Elliott was re-elected president of the Falls Church Volunteer Fire Department at the annual business meeting held recently in the engine house. O. C. Pearson resigned as chief and Clyde Donaldson was elected to his office. Other officers chosen were Vernon L. Whitmer, vice president; Joseph B. Dixon, treasurer; Jerome Gibson, assistant secretary; Charles Seaton, fire marshal; Meyer Copeland, engineer and Joseph Birch assistant engineer. Gabriel Westman was elected first assistant chief, Herman Neff second assistant chief and Pete Bradley third assistant chief. Frank Carpenter and O. C. Pearson were chosen trustees. The office of secretary was not filled, the former secretary, Reginald Turner, agreeing to continue to serve until a permanent selection is made.

Preliminary financial reports of the carnival just closed indicated that the net proceeds will exceed the $1,500 cleared last year. The gross receipts totaled approximately $4,000. The fire department women's auxiliary cleared $275 on its refreshment stand.

The Rev. J. G. Sadtler, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, McLean, and St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Rixey Station, has tendered his resignatoin pending holding a meeting of its full membership, which will be called as soon as its registrar, B. G. Foster, returns from Europe.

Whether the resignation of the Rev. Mr. Sadtler will mean the eventual separation of the two churches, which so far have operated semi-independently, with separate vestries and finances, but supporting one rector, has not yet been worked out. St. Mary's congregation is understood to be anxious to secure a full-time rector, the present arrangement, entailing church services at 10 a. m., not suiting many of their parishioners.

The Falls Church Garden Club has completed plans for its second annual gladiolus show, to be held Saturday, August 3 from 3 to 9:30 p. m. in the Town Hall. The contest is open to all amateur gardeners, the only stipulation being that flowers must be grown by the exhibitor. Entries will be received at the hall from 7 a. m. to noon, receptacles to be furnished by the club.

The committee which is arranging the show includes Virgil P. Kalmbach, chairman; Mrs. L. H. Weld, Miss Bertha Holmes, H. G. Phetis, Mrs. Howard E. Middleton, Mrs. R. W. Williams, Miss Ethel Reid, L. A. Jackson and E. G. Beinhardt. Prizes are being offered in the different classes by nursery firms of Falls Church and Washington and by club members. Judges have not yet been selected.

The several classifications include grandiflorus type, primulatis grandiflorus type, primulatis type and seedling gladioli, one spike each of different colors, and in vases, baskets and bowls. Garden flowers, other than glads, include groups for zinnias, marigolds, tube roses, day and water lilies, bulbous lilies and roses.

The flower arrangement classes will be judged for their artistic merits solely and include bowls of roses, nasturtiums, petunias, perennials, both one variety and mixed; baskets of roses, mixed flowers, single and mixed perennials; corsages and minatures. The children's section provides for best displays of glads, mixed flowers, wild flowers and single varieties. Over 60 separate classes are listed on the ambitious program.

There will be a special noncompetitive educational and novelty section, each exhibit to be accompanied by a card explaining its special features.

The library committee of the Falls Church Women's Club announces the following books have been added to the library shelves during July: Freeman's "Life of R. E. Lee," 4 volumes; "The Sleeping Child," Rosman; "A Few Foolish Ones," Carroll; "Young Robby," De La Roche; "Look Homeward Angel," Wolfe; "The Lark Legacy," Rice; "Within This Present," Barnes; "Time Out of Mind," Fields; "Rabble in Arms," Roberts; "Now We Set Out," Ertz; "White Gate," Deeping; "The Black God," Sutton; "Heaven My Destination," Wilder; "A Man Called Cervantes," Frank; "Matador," Steen; "National Velvet," Bagnold; "Forty Days of Musa Dagh," Werfel; "Paths of Glory," Cobb.

Opening of the McLean carnival Saturday has not been postponed due to an outbreak of infantile paralysis in Fairfax County, as reported, carnival officials announced last night. Only one paralysis case has been diagnosed in the county, according to Dr. A. J. Carson, jr., the county health officer, and parents have been requested to keep children under 16 years of age away from the carnival and similarly large gatherings.

U. S. Work Begun In Virginia Forests

By the Associated Press.

Acting Regional Forester Scott said yesterday that work under new allotments has been started in the national forest areas in Virginia, with approximately $300,000 to be spent in the State.

A quick start was given the work in the George Washington National Forest with the forester reporting from the Harrisonburg office that 46 men from relief rolls already had been put to work. The forester, H. L. Borden, added that approximately that many more from the relief rolls would be put to work in the immediate future. Scott said similar activity was to be expected in the Mountain Lake Forest with headquarters at Roanoke.

Scott said virtually none of the new $300,000 will be spent in the Monongahela Forest. He said funds for work in that forest were listed under West Virginia allotments because headquarters for the forest is in Elkins, W. Va.

Canning Work Plan to Start In Alexandria

Project Also Includes the Planting of Vegetables for Poor.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 623.

Mrs. Leroy E. Peabody, director of community garden projects for Alexandria, has announced that an allocation of $1,893.20 has been made by the Government for the operation of a canning community project here. The work of the canning products will be distributed to the worthy poor the coming winter.

Mrs. Peabody states the work will start within a few days and will give employment to ten women in addition to four supervisors, and will continue over a period of three months. The workers will be paid in accordance with the accepted wage scale.

White workers will be employed at the domestic science room of the Alexandria High School, and colored at the Parker-Gray school. Vegetables to be canned include beans, tomatoes and carrots.

In addition to this, Mrs. Peabody also states that it is proposed to set aside cabbage, sweet potatoes, white potatoes, and lima beans for winter consumption. These vegetables are raised on a plot of ground east of the Mount Vernon Memorial highway loaed by Dr. E. A. Gorman.

The city council has loaned the project the land surrounding the former poorhouse property, where winter vegetables will be planted at once.

The last of the pay checks for the striking women workers of the Century Manufacturing Co. were given out yesterday. The concern pays every two weeks and the strike started between pay days.

The picketing is still being handled by the girls in two shifts, from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m., and from 6 p. m. to 7 a. m., and it is stated this will continue until some adjustment is made.

It was stated yesterday that Sidney Weinman, president of the company, who has been on the road, was expected to reach Baltimore today, and will come to Alexandria tomorrow for a conference with Howard T. Colvin, labor conciliator of the Department of Labor. Mr. Colvin held a conference with Morris Weinman, but no agreement was reached.

The Alexandria Kiwanis Club will be host at an interclub meeting today at 12:30 o'clock in the George Mason Hotel, when the Washington club will be guests, William G. Ilch is program chairman, and the meeting will be presided over by First Vice President Harry F. Kennedy.

Fannie Lambert, colored, living in the 400 block North Royal street, shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday morning aroused and lighted a cigarette while lying in bed, and went off to sleep with the result that she was taken to the Alexandria Hospital a short time later and treated for severe burns on her chest and face.

At installation exercises on Tuesday night for recently elected officers of Marley Encampment No. 6, Odd Fellows, conducted by District Deputy Grand Patriarch W. B. Hoffman, John G. Runaldue was made chief patriarch; Victor E. Deitze, senior warden; Thomas G. Schmidt, junior warden; Andrew J. Hall, high priest; John A. Martin, financial scribe, for the tenth consecutive year; L. T. Webster, recording secretary for the fourteenth consecutive year, and George W. Bontz, treasurer for the thirty-fourth consecutive year.

James R. Walters, retiring chief patriarch, was presented with a jewel, the presentation for the lodge being made by Leroy S. Bendheim.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The dollar was generally strong in relation to leading European currencies in world exchange dealings yesterday. The imminence of a cabinet crisis in The Netherlands and the rise in the discount rate at Amsterdam pushed guilders to the fore. They were leaders of the decline.

In New York the guilder lost 20 of a cent at 67.25 cents, and 90-day futures were under pressure at a discount of 2 cents below the spot rate.

The franc felt sympathetic pressure, losing .01½ of a cent in the American market at 6.60⅜ cents. Earlier in Paris the dollar had strengthened to the equivalent of 6.605 cents to the franc.

Buying from the disturbed continental centers combined with trade demand to improve the dollar in London to 4.95⅝ to the pound. Later, in New York, the pound declined ⅛ of a cent at $4.95½.

The lira, a weak feature Tuesday after suspension of the gold coverage provision for notes, rallied .10 of a cent in New York to 8.12 cents after improving earlier in London. Official support was believed to have been responsible.

Company Gift Exemptions Hit By Roosevelt

President, Social Groups May Wage Fight on Tax Program.

Senate Finance Committee announced that group would commence hearings on the proposed tax bill Monday, explaining that he understood the House committee would have a bill ready by the end of this week.

Exemption Proposed.

The basis of the controversy between the President and spokesmen for the private welfare agencies is an amendment to the proposed tax bill, sponsored in the House by Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and in the Senate by Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia.

This amendment would add to section 23 of the revenue act, which enumerates exemptions, charitable contributions by corporations not in excess of 5 per cent of their net earnings. At present no exemption is allowed for such gifts, except in limited cases where the recipient, such as a hospital, performs a service for the corporation by taking care of its employes. Individuals, however, are allowed an exemption for their charitable contributions.

Asked whether he favored the McCormack-George amendment, the President, who usually declines to discuss pending legislation, said the answer would be found in his veto message of a bill in 1930 when he was Governor of New York. The Legislature voted to permit public utilities to contribute to organized charities and he vetoed the measure, he said.

He explained he had opposed corporations contributing to charities in a conversation with a Southern utility executive and that the latter was horrified at the thought. He said represenatives of his firm were instructed to make gifts to charitable affairs, such as church suppers and bazaars, in the case of drives for funds by welfare organizations, to place the company's name at the head of the subscription list.

Good Will Is Bought.

This executive said it was done to create local good will, the President said, adding this was his objection to the practice. He said he did not believe corporations should be permitted to purchase good will and then obtain a tax exemption on the sum spent.

Moreover, the President contended, stockholders in a corporation, many of them living on such income, had a right to determine what amount of their money should be given to charity and to select the charities. If a corporation gave 5 per cent of its earnings to charity it meant that a stockholder entitled to a $5,000 dividend prior to the contribution would receive $250 less.

In the statement Burns gave out soon after the President's remarks, in which Mgr. Wagner and Shroder concurred, it was contended that insistence on taxing corporation gifts to corporations would "destroy the partnership which President Roosevelt has asserted is indispensable to national recovery."

Discrimination Charged.

He held that taxation of the corporation gifts constituted discrimination against "the keystone of support for private social agencies," adding that the new social security legislation plus heavier corporation taxes would make corporations reluctant to continue their contributions to private agencies unless some new inducement were offered.

The statement contended that $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 to the Government in taxes on charitable gifts to private agencies "might easily become only a fraction of the increased Federal expenditure involved in picking up the cost of care, curb and prevention of social ills which the private agencies will be obliged to lay down as the tax stops the flow of corporation giving."

Welfare Work Harmed.

Burns turned his attack directly on the President at the press conference he held, contending that the Chief Executive's objections, if met, would "wreck" private social welfare work. He said the President was "not only insisting that corporations be taxed for their gifts, but he is going to call on them to pay additional taxes."

"We believe corporations should be encouraged to support private charities, because they owe these agencies something," declared Burns. "We have conducted surveys in cities over the country. In Minneapolis we found one large industry, 43 per cent of whose employes were direct beneficiaries of private philanthropic services.

"In Cleveland we investigated seven large industrial plants, and found 38 per cent of the employes were rendered some kind of welfare serivce by our agencies.

"Many corporations appreciate that contributing to the Community Chest, or to the Catholic or Jewish philanthropies, is the most effective way of carrying on welfare work. Any conception of corporation responsibility that does not include an obligation to local private charities belongs to the horse-and-buggy days."

A. F. of L. Wins Railway Union Tilt in Virginia

Court Rules Against Company Organization of Road's Employes.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., July 24.—The American Federation of Labor won its fight against the Virginian Railway today when Judge Luther B. Way, in Federal District Court, ruled that the railway should recognize an A. F. of L. union, rather than a company union, as the representative of the "back shop" employes.

One of the most significant features of the 29-page opinion delivered by Judge Way, according to lawyers, was his support of the constitutionality of the railway labor act, as amended in 1934, a controversial measure on which labor disputes exist in railroads throughout the country.

Informed of the ruling, W. H. T. Loyall, general solicitor of the railway, tonight announced that the decision will be appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals. During the trial attorneys for both sides said the case would be appealed whatever Judge Way's decision. Judge Way himself expressed the hope that the case eventually will get to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The case, which has been pending for several weeks, involves the petition of System Federation No. 40, of the railway employes' department of the American Federation of Labor, for an injunction requiring the Virginian Railway management to "cease molesting" the A. F. of L. union as the legal representative of approximately 550 back shop workers. The injunctions are granted in the decision.

Nice's Naming Of Humphreys Hinted Illegal

Attorney General's Aid Cites Nonresidence of Salisbury Judge.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 24.—Gov. Nice's appointment of Marion A. Humphreys as judge of the Salisbury People's Court "was not in literal accordance with the statute," the attorney general's office said today.

The statement was made in a letter written by Assistant Attorney General W. L. Henderson to State Senator O. Straughan Lloyd (Republican), of Wicomico. Senator Lloyd had asked the attorney general for a ruling on validity of the Humphreys appointment.

Henderson declined to make a formal ruling because such action has not been requested by any of the three persons who would have been bound by it. However, his opinion as to the legal status of the appointment was included in the letter to Senator Lloyd.

The Salisbury People's Court has jurisdiction in the three election districts wholly or in part included in the city. The statute provides that judges of the court shall be residents of the district included and Humphreys is not a resident of the area.

His right to the office was contested in a suit filed in Salisbury yesterday. The plaintiff offers the fact that Humphreys is not a resident of the district as his principal contention that he should not hold the office.

The attorney general is counsel for Humphreys in such an action and a decision as to the defense in the case will not be made until Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor returns to Baltimore Monday. Papers in the Salisbury suit have not been forwarded to O'Conor's office here.

Page Court Frees 5 of Robber Gang

Lewis Smith in Prison, Companions Acquitted.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., July 24.—The Page County Circuit Court today wrote the final chapter to the Lewis Smith gang. A year ago Lewis Smith, 29, of Madison County, started a series of store robberies in this county. For some time he worked alone. He robbed the D. S. Kiblinger store, 10 miles south of Luray, and the stores of William Meadows and William Lam in the southern part of the county. He eluded officers at every robbery.

Four months ago Smith organized a gang of boys and young men and returned. Smith led his gang into Stanley, 8 miles south of Luray, placed his youthful watchers at vantage points, and kicked in the front door of the N. J. Louderback hardware store.

Citizens of Stanley were aroused at midnight when the robbers roared away in an old automobile and officers soon were on the trail. When their car broke down the officers caught up, but Smith escaped on foot. Before daylight Smith was surrounded as he attempted to cross Skyline Drive. In a second dash for liberty he was brought down by shotgun fire. Believing that he was dying, Smith exonerated his companions, Joe Richards, Elmer Anderson, Albert Woodward, John Wesley Smith and James Smith, and was given eight years in the penitentiary. Today a jury in the Page County court acquitted his five companions.

Tibetan Monks Begin Search For a New Infant Dalai Lama

By the Associated Press.

Lhasa, Tibet, July 24.—The search for Tibet's new Dalai Lama—the unknown baby reposing in some humble manger or costly crib in this land of ancient mystery—had officially begun today.

A mission of leading monks, accompanied by four soothsayers, was en route from Lhasa to the Holy Kali Lake where they expected to see the baby's present home mirrored in its waters.

Awaiting this future supreme ruler of Buddhism's 150,800,000 followers is the sacred, ancient "test by fire and water." Holy flames and waters brought from the seven holy rivers of India are important in the selection of the infant, who will become "the patron of angels and all living things."

The last Dalai Lama died in December, 1933, and since then giant prayer wheels in the Pota-La Dalais Palace in this forbidden city of Lhasa have been spinning as the wise men prepared for their quest.

Plentifully supplied with gold to protect them against corruption, the mission will visit 300 homes scattered throughout Tibet, whence claims have come that the young son of the house was born at the exact moment that the former Dalai Lama died.

The exact moment of birth is important, for Tibetans believe the Dalai Lama's immortal soul enters into the body of some new-born baby at the instant of his passing.

A score, perhaps, of infant candidates will be chosen and brought to Lhasa for the final test and choice by the grand council of lamas.

The Shenandoah Valley Apple Cider & Vinegar Co. announced that three of the buildings are being enlarged. More space for equipment and storage is needed in the cannery, press house and warehouse.

Troops to Stay, Keep Army Law At Terre Haute

Situation Still Tense, Says General, Sending Half of Force Home.

By the Associated Press.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 24.—National Guard officers toured Terre Haute today and decided that, although union labor's general strike is ended, a tense situation still prevails.

Nevertheless it was decided to demobilize all but 500 of the 1,100 troops rushed into this city Monday when members of 40 unions started a "labor holiday" to show their sympathy for fellow unionists who had been on a four-month strike to force recognition from the Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co.

Brig. Gen. D. Wray Deprez, commanding the Guardsmen, and Col. Albert Whitcomb, next in command, conferred an hour with city and county officials and emerged to say that the martial law proclaimed by Gov. Paul V. McNutt would be continued indefinitely.

City Still "Very Tense."

"We will demobilize some of the troops, but will keep enough here to preserve order during a situation that is still very tense," said Col. Whitcomb.

A force of considerable size, it was indicated, will be left to guard the enameling plant. Union leaders attributed the calling of the general strike to resentment over alleged importation of armed guards and strike-breakers by the enameling concern.

Charles L. Richardson, of Washington, and Harry E. Scheck, of Chicago, United States Department of Labor conciliators, remained here to attempt to compose differences between the Columbian company and the strikers.

Insists on Protection.

The conciliators quoted C. B. Gorby, enameling company president, as saying the imported guards would be removed and a conference held with an employes' committee if a guarantee of adequate protection for the mill property is given.

They said Gorby declared he would not consider a police guard sufficient protection. Last June union sympathizers stormed the plant and caused damage estimated by Gorby at $15,000.

The city's business activities took on a normal aspect this morning when some 22,000 unionists heeded the request of T. N. Taylor, former State Federation of Labor president, and a committee of union employes to call off the general strike.

College Professors Held.

Street cars, buses and taxicabs resumed operation and stores and factories, deserted by union employes during the "holiday," reopened.

For 135 men arrested by military authorities on a variety of offenses the "holiday" continued, but they spent it in jail.

Most of those held were accused of minor infractions of the martial law proclamation which forbade assemblage and the carrying of arms.

Capt. Garrett Olds said the prisoners included two faculty members of the Indiana State Teachers College, located in this city. They are Prof. J. Raymond Shannon and Prof. W. O. David. Both are charged with violating the rule against assemblage.

Hospital Attache Cleared of Theft

Bought Patients' Articles, Mrs. McDonald Proves.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., July 24.—Answering to a charge of theft of goods fom the Springfield State Hospital, Sykesville, Mrs. Lillian P. McDonald, director of occupational therapy, was acquitted in circuit court here yesterday after testifying she had bought the articles from inmates.

Investigation was instigated several weeks ago when a shipment of handicraft articles made by inmates of the hospital was intercepted by police in Baltimore. Yesterday's testimony brought out that Mrs. McDonald had been given several articles and had purchased the remainder from patients.

Taking the witness stand, Dr. J. A. McAdoo, superintendent of the institution, explained the hospital's method of disposing of articles made by inmates. It was revealed that articles made by patients of materials furnished from sources other than the hospital could be given away or sold.

Relief Heads Purchase More Virginia Potatoes

Painter, Va., July 24 (AP).—The Emergency Relief Administration today purchased 226 more carloads of Virginia Eastern Shore potatoes from the $350,000 appropriation for that purpose, raising the total number of carloads bought to 605. The appropriation was based on a $2 per barrel price, but the market has fallen 75 cents below that figure, which was established for a number of days by an embargo laid down by striking growers.

Loadings today continued light, as farmers sought to avoid railway demurrage charges. Only those cars which dealers can sell are being loaded.

Virginia Board Cuts Liquor, Wine Prices

In its announcement the board said 22 new wines will be added to its list and eight dropped while 48 new spirits will be added and 27 eliminated.

Poison to Kill Beetles Sought By Maryland

University's Experiment Attempting to Develop New Insectide.

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., July 24.—Experiments to develop a poison to exterminate the Japanese beetles or to hold them in check until sufficient parasites can be raised to combat them are being pushed at the University of Maryland.

Dr. Ernest N. Cory, State entomologist of the university's extension service, said today after a tour of the devastated orchards and farms of Cecil County that no effective poison for the adult insects has been devised.

Dr. Cory pointed out that two parasites—a wasp and a certain type of fly—have been found which are natural enemies of the Japanese beetles, but it would be 15 or 20 years before these parasites can be propagated in sufficient numbers to check the spread of the beetles.

Cary said there was little danger of the beetles spreading to any extent outside of Cecil County and the Baltimore area this year.

Most of the funds set aside for the control of the insects in Maryland have been concentrated in these two sections. Dr. Cory said additional funds are needed.

"We hope," he said, "to get additional funds from the board of public works for the next two years. We are going to ask the next session of the State Legislature for an appropriation to carry on this control work."

Not A Revolution.

An uprising in Mexico is usually an occasion for alarm. That country has so frequently attempted to settle its internal disputes by revolution that every local disturbance gives rise to apprehension. In the present instance, however, simultaneous uprisings in two states seem to have strengthened the authority of the federal government.

In Tabasco a revolt against dictatorial rule has led to a complete overturn in the state administration. President Cardenas took the leadership in this move after a fight among political factions had resulted in 10 deaths and a larger number of injuries. The local governor was removed on the ground that he was subservient to a dictator—Thomas Garrido Canabal, leader of the "Red Shirts" and one of Mexico's chief anti-religious crusaders.

The interesting aspect of this incident is that it put the federal government into cooperation with dissatisfied citizens in sweeping out a local administration which had apparently become intolerable. Mexico's constitution gives the central government authority to step in when disorder becomes acute in political sub-divisions. That the authorities at Mexico City are disposed to use that power to curb extreme fanaticism and unlawful oppression in the states is especially significant in view of the religious controversy south of the Rio Grande.

To a large extent religious persecution is a state issue in Mexico. The churches of Tabasco have been closed, not because of any national policy, but because that state has been dominated by a powerful church-baiter. It does not appear that Canabal's power was broken because of his anti-religious activities. Nevertheless, his downfall should have a salutary effect on other local fanatics and tyrants whose extreme policies have kept the people in a state of unrest.

In some respects the "purge" which has taken place in Tabasco and is expected in Tamaulipas is a sequence to the split between President Cardenas and Gen. Calles. Both movements have a background of internal politics. But if they lead to more moderate policies in dealing with the religious issue the Mexican people will have reason for gratification.

A Reassuring Probe.

Whether or not the forthcoming investigation of the District building inspector's office will reveal anything irregular, it is reassuring that at least some watch is being kept over the various departments of the local government.

Under the appointive system by which Washington is governed, the citizenry has scant opportunity to hear of municipal irregularities. In any other community, the existence of opposing political parties helps to keep city offices in order through fear of exposure. But in Washington, where local politics can play but a minor part in the administration of public affairs, no such check can be relied upon.

With Washington having just been named as second in the Nation from the viewpoint of building activity, the slightest suspicion of favoritism or graft in the granting of building permits should be investigated.

When Courage Fails.

Several months ago a courageous committee, assigned to the task by the House of Representatives, investigated crime in the District of Columbia. It discovered laxity in the enforcement of law and a consequent high rate of crime that would disgrace any capital of a great nation. Those findings were promptly reported to the House District Committee along with extensive recommendations for their correction.

Having been approved by the District Committee, this report was widely distributed and read. It brought forth favorable comment from many sources. District residents were delighted that at last action to curb the abnormal rate of robbery, murder and other violent crimes was in prospect. But the report contained some uncomplimentary evidence and conclusions regarding the work of various officials. Through political influence one of its sections was drastically revised, and now another has been entirely deleted.

The original report is still in the hands of the public. No official effort has been made to modify or contradict the evidence it contains. But a majority of the committee members have been influenced to withdraw their support of an important section on grounds of political expediency. The weakness of the District's law enforcement machinery has not been corrected. The urgent need for more effective policies and means of dealing with criminals remains the same. But the courage of a few Congressmen has failed.

When this surrender to political influence is added to the District Commissioners' weak acceptance of the "gentlemen's agreement," the outlook for a vigorous movement against criminal elements becomes gloomy indeed. Effective government in Washington has again been subordinated to political expediency in a manner which challenges the attention of the White House as well as every local civic organization.

Liquor Control Problems.

The Supreme Court decision in the Schechter case not only overthrew the NRA, but necessitated passage of new regulatory legislation to control the liquor traffic. There is little disposition to question the need for a successor to the defunct FACA, but strong differences of opinion exist as to whether the new agency should be an independent organization or a bureau of the Treasury Department.

Both Secretary Morgenthau and Joseph H. Choate, jr., who was director of the FACA, have urged complete segregation of the regulatory body from the Treasury, which is charged with collection of revenue from traffic in liquor. However, the Ways and Means Committee amended the control bill to provide for placing the new Federal Alcohol Administration in the Treasury, and the House has passed the bill in that form.

The controversy over the status of this agency is more significant than it superficially appears to be. If it were the intention to transfer the collection of revenue as well as to place control of the liquor trade in the hands of a single body, it should unquestionably be a part of the Treasury. Prior to prohibition, the Bureau of Internal Revenue was a most efficient enforcement agency. Illegal distilling and evasion of tax payments by legalized establishments were severely penalized while bootlegging evils were of minor importance.

It might be argued, therefore, with some reason, that the country ought to return to the old system of leaving sole responsibility to the Treasury for enforcement of liquor regulations. The situation has changed radically, however, since inauguration of the experiment which ended so disastrously. Prohibition introduced abuses which can only be eradicated by new control methods. Furthermore, repeal carried an obligation to protect "dry" States against importations of liquor from "wet" areas.

The FACA was organized to stamp out certain social evils connected with the traffic in liquor, including some abuses that antedated prohibition. That, too, is the main purpose of the House bill, and for that reason the Administration is opposed to making the new control agency a subordinate branch of the Treasury. As a matter of fact, the bill would give the Treasury only power to control salaries paid to the staff and to approve the rules and regulations issued by the alcohol administrator. Under this system of divided authority, the Treasury would have to bear the brunt of complaints for actions over which it had practically no control, while the Alcohol Administration would suffer loss of prestige.

Another provision of the House bill which has been bitterly contested would permit sales of liquor in bulk. The Federal authorities insist that this amendment would greatly increase the ease with which the laws may be evaded. Those in favor of the change, on the other hand, point out that the prohibition of sales in bulk has not prevented extensive frauds and that bottling regulations give an advantage to a few large firms. The pros and cons of these and other controversial issues could be debated endlessly, and more or less profitlessly.

Of more importance than the exact nature of the rules and regulations governing traffic in liquor is the character of the men who undertake to enforce them and the reasonableness of the regulatory system. Instead of trying to establish elaborate precautions against sales in bulk, the House might better have agreed to extension of civil service protection to the employes of the alcohol control agency. And most important of all, it should have heeded the advice of the experts who have vainly emphasized the need for reasonable taxes, reasonable prices and simplified rules and regulations that would make bootlegging less profitable. Until these elementary requirements are met, the country will continue to suffer from the activities of racketeers and bootleggers, regardless of legislative safeguards.

In The Balance.

To New York public school teachers, at least, the question of weight is no joke. Neither is reducing any more of a fad with them than with Hollywood stars, whose contracts depend on how much they tip the scales. The seriousness of this problem is shown in the case of Miss Rose Freistater, who is appealing to the New York State commissioner of education for a regular license to teach. Acting according to standards set up ten years ago, the examining board of city schools has decided she is ineligible on the premise that the reduced life expectancy of an overweight person would "tend to constitute a drain on the pension fund."

Apparently this teacher's scholastic background leaves little to be desired. She has been permitted to substitute since she was first refused a regular license in 1931. The merit of her work in the classroom is attested by the head of her department who declares that "it would be difficult to overstate its excellence." And for good measure, though perhaps that is a delicate point in this controversy, she has more than demonstrated her qualities of courage and tenacity by losing 20 pounds in the six months allotted to her for that purpose. Unfortunately, she still has 30 pounds to go.

On the surface, the controversy over Miss Freistater's weight appears a little absurd and not without humor. In the face of her training and ability to perform the job which she has selected as a vocation, it seems ridiculous that she has been weighed and found unwanted. But there is a much more serious aspect to the whole question. Are teachers in the public schools of New York to be selected for their fitness as instructors or because they are good retirement risks?

Plug-Hat Politics.

No one can now fail to see the Virgin Islands squabble in its true perspective. What has long been plain to every close observer has become apparent to the most casual onlooker: politics lies at the bottom of the controversy and a particularly cheap brand of politics, at that.

Fortunately for the Virgin Islands, President Roosevelt has recalled both Gov. Pearson and Judge Wilson, the two principal points of friction. Lieut. Gov. Lawrence W. Cramer, a man generally recognized as a tactful and efficient administrator, will assume control of the islands. Though various protests have already been registered against him—he, like Gov. Pearson, is a Republican appointee, and the political fever of the islands has not yet completely subsided—it is safe to predict that the islands will soon return to their accustomed simple ways of life, particularly since the President's Alexandrine stroke leaves each faction with a fair claim to victory.

Not so fortunate, however, is the result as regards this country. Messrs. Pearson and Wilson were under investigation on charges and counter-charges of malfeasance and inefficiency. Before any conclusion could be reached, both have been appointed to important new positions in the Federal Government. Political compromises of this sort are nothing new in Washington. But when, to seat Judge Wilson, it was necessary to force the resignation of Dr. Amy N. Stannard, a psychiatric expert who for 12 years has served on the Federal Parole Board, an emphatic protest must be registered.

Indulgence in plug-hat politics has resulted in the disorganization of the already miserable Virgin Islands; in the pretty spectacle of a Cabinet officer and a United States Senator vehemently contradicting each other; in the creation of one more bureaucratic office; and, most lamentable, in the ousting of a seasoned and expert probation official from a board that is none too strong as it stands. All in all it is a pitiful demonstration of expediency in government carried to the point of ineptitude.

Salmon And Dams.

The annual income from the salmon fisheries of the Columbia River in Oregon is between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000 or, as William L. Finley points out in the current issue of Nature Magazine, the equivalent of a 5 per cent return on a $200,000,000 investment.

The salmon, it is well known, is hatched in fresh water, proceeds downstream to the open sea and, at maturity, fights its tortuous way hundreds of miles back up the same river to spawn and die. It is during this homeward "run" over falls and through rapids that the season's catch is netted. But if the passage back to the spawning places is blocked, the multitude of fish that must breed there and there alone will be exterminated.

There are now in process of construction on the Columbia River two public works projects known as the Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams. For the first, $31,000,000 has been appropriated and for the second, $61,000,000. It is a matter of serious doubt whether these huge investments will ever be justified, so slight is the demand for electric energy in that sparsely settled country. There is grave danger, moreover, that by their construction the salmon industry of the Columbia River will be ruined.

Some engineers hope that means can be devised to enable the fish to circumvent the dams, either by fish ladders or elevators. For construction of such devices the Secretary of Interior has alloted $3,200,000 although $5,000,000 was the minimum estimate of fish experts. Neither contrivance, however, has been more than partly successful in experiments thus far, the fish being shy of the complicated machinery and unaccustomed artificial pools. More than that, with the river dammed, the food supply of the newly hatched fingerlings will be seriously affected; the deep, slow water will invite the propagation of bass which naturally feed on the infant salmon, and it is highly questionable whether the small fish will be able to survive a journey downstream through swirling turbines or over high spillways.

Thus the Government, in its enthusiasm for made work and for vast expenditures, is threatening one of the most valuable natural resources of the Northwest. The dam projects of themselves are a risky gamble; when the future of a $200,000,000 industry is added to the odds, the entire venture seems inexcusable.

It has been demonstrated that injections of gold into the blood stream will cure arthritis.—Medical journal note. Still, we'll just struggle along with the arthritis rather than have the Supreme Court declare us unconstitutional.

In the midst of change and instability peculiar to this sorry sphere, a notable exception lies in the list of available sins. In the past 5,000 years no new sin has been discovered or devised and none has become obsolete.

Good Hot Weather Talk.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Skating is one of the most invigorating and graceful of sports. Though there are thousands of splendid skaters here in Washington, they seldom have an opportunity to enjoy this sport because of the mild winters. These thousands, reared on Northern lakes and rivers, would appreciate a skating rink made by artificial freezing, so much so that they would respond with remuneration sufficient to more than pay for installing the rink and maintaining it.

Washington has about $50,000,000 invested in park lands that are mostly idle in winter when we need the invigoration of the outdoors most. Artificial skating rinks would add much pleasure and profit to life here in Washington.

History Repeating?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

On page 338 of the biography of Francis I of France, by Francis Hackett, occur these lines:

His magistrates might remonstrate with him, but his must be the word of law, his the will that must prevail. He publicly affirmed his supremacy over parlement.

The person thus described was an absolute monarch who lived and ruled 400 years ago. It is, of course, impossible to believe that this bit of ancient history would find its counterpart in a present-day republic. W.

Woodcock In The District?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Today I was witness to a remarkable sight in the ravine back of my garden: An American Woodcock (Philominor) boring among last year's leaves for worms! I have lived on the place (Mills avenue northeast) for the past 34 years, but this is the first and only specimen of this prized game bird that I have seen in this locality, or for that matter, in the District.

I would like to hear, through your columns, if others have observed the bird in a thickly settled section of the city.

Tyndale Or Wycliffe?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In a communication dated July 17, Mrs. Nancy Hood quotes Lincoln's famous words "of, by, and for the people," as from William Tyndale's translation of the Bible.

You ask as a caption, "Did Lincoln Read It?"

I think not. As a matter of information, will Mrs. Hood or some one of your readers locate the quotation definitely?

I have seen it attributed to Wycliffe. A. H. THOMPSON.

Crucifixion Stories.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In your paper of July 11 is published a letter from your Manila correspondent, Vicente Albano Pacis. He states that recently the excommunicated priest, Aglipay, told him that:

In the Catholic Bible it is said that when a blind soldier pierced Jesus Christ with his weapon, Jesus' blood spurted out, sprinkling and curing his blind eye. But, my dear sir, Jesus Christ had been dead for more than 24 hours; there could have been no live blood in his body at all!

Your correspondent writes that this statement shows "a vague submission to scientific facts" on the part of Aglipay. There is no such record in the Catholic Bible as Aglipay knew and as Pacis should have known.

In the Gospel of St. John, chapter 19, it is recorded that the Jews because it was the Parasceve, besought Pilate that, in order that the bodies might not remain on the crosses on the Sabbath, their legs might be broken to hasten their death and that they might be taken away. Accordingly the legs of the two thieves were broken. But after the Roman soldiers came to Jesus they saw that he was already dead and they did not break his legs.

"But one of the soldiers with a spear opened His side and immediately there came out blood and water" (verse 34). This took place not 24 hours after the death of Christ, nor was there any report of the cure of a soldier's blind eye.

Public Or Private Money?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Concerning an investor's protest claiming that there were thousands of genuine protests against the Wheeler-Rayburn public utilities bill: Yes, like those from Pennsylvania. But granted that there are thousands of protesting stockholders, should we, the "peepul," the remaining millions that Mr. Collins seems to hold in such scorn, continue to pay tribute to the octopus, the useless holding companies?

"The money spent was not public money, but stockholders' money." Is that so, and where does the stockholder get his money from, may I ask, if not from the public?

Who was it that said the U. S. A. stands for "United Sheep of America," we are so easily shorn? All holding companies, all Insullism, should be destroyed.

The Church Versus The State.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have read your editorial regarding Germany, "Barbarity Unabashed," but can not say that I agree with your point of view. It seems to me that we had better attend to our own business and let the Germans work out their own salvation. We have not shown an overamount of tolerance ourselves on similar occasions.

Do you remember the time when Al Smith was running for President and when the Republican Party was threatening the Democratic Party with civil war if a Catholic President should be elected? In Germany they have shown great leniency toward political Catholicism. They had a huge number of Catholic priests in Parliament before Hitler came into power, and the Catholics constantly made common cause with the Communists and Socialists against the rest of the country. How would you like the same conditions over here? That would be a different matter, would it not?

Hitler, as you may know, is a Catholic himself and has had great patience with political Catholicism. But the showdown had to come. He can not possibly tolerate that the Catholics have their own uniformed youth organizations and train them in contempt for the laws of the country. Mussolini, when he started on his career some years ago, had the same fight with the Pope and told him plainly that the education of youth was his business and that he would stand for no meddling of the church in politics. Can Hitler be expected to stand for more than Mussolini was willing to stand for? They know something about religious trouble-making in Germany and are determined to put a stop to it. What Hitler objects to is not the religion but the preaching of politics from the pulpit, and Hitler is by no means the only one who has his troubles with the church. In Mexico and Spain they are having the same trouble, and the Irish know something about it, too.

As to the Jewish question, there is a great deal to be said about that, too, and it is not all in favor of the Jews. When a Negro is lynched over here the press has little to say about it. How would you like it if the foreign press would call us a barbarous nation each time an occurrence like that takes place? You wouldn't, would you? Well, then, let us stop throwing stones on others and thereby avoid all possible stone-throwing in our direction. CHARLES FUEGNER.

Washington, July 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am somewhat distressed to see you emphasize one side of the religious controversies in the several countries of the world. I submit that you are yielding the rationalistic for the emotionalist viewpoint.

It is conceivable that Hitler and Mexico are doing just what they are charged with doing and without justification; and then, again, it is possible that they are not. It is much more likely that Germany is going through with a parallel of what happened to the South after the war of the States.

But conceding the worst against Germany, yet there is nothing charged against her equivalent to what is being done to Teutonic people of Free Judgment in Austria; and the world passes that by. The Teutons there have asked for no aid; nor, for that matter, in Ulster, Scotland or elsewhere. These things occasion no comment from the press. Why?

Because these Teutonic people are a rationalistic people; while those who are Latin or Irish are likely to be emotionalistic.

That Roman Catholic clerics do interfere and try to intimidate governments is a fact as old as 1,000 years. It has been but a few months since Archbishop Curley threatened this Government with 20,000,000 votes. The attack on the eighteenth amendment was a result of cultural differences.

Another Call For Dr. France.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The University of Maryland is not something to play with! It needs and should have the highly specialized, trained services of a man of breadth and experience in guiding serious affairs and interests. If such a man at the same time has the public acceptance of dignity and service of a former United States Senator, little would be left to desire.

Hence, my own pleasure, shared with all thinking persons, over the mention of the name of Dr. France. It is my belief that this distinguished son of Maryland, this educator, scientist, physician, trained expert in appropriate fields, entertains the idea that an administration of the University of Maryland that would elevate it in quality, insure peace, and efficiency, would be the best sort of investment for the taxpayer of the State. Doubtless he will be heard from—he should be, in due time.

The Post Impressionist

"Sign Here, Please!"

Post Office, Thursday.

LIVES there a man (or even woman) with soul so dead as never to himself (or herself) have quoted those lines of Burns—not Scott—about wanting some power to "gie us" the gift "to see oursel's as ithers see us?"

We ourselves were, indeed, repeating the phrase only this morning when there reached our desk the following letter from a distinguished foreign author now visiting our native shores.

"Before I came to this so magnificent country of yours," he writes, "I shared concerning it an impression common to most of the non-American world. I believed, in effect, that the national sport of all you energetic Americans, of whatever political faction, was watching baseball. I believed that the chief action of your Communist faction was direct action. Yet at length, after a remainder here of six weeks, it becomes evident to me that this is an impression totally erroneous.

"I find that the chief sport of all of you, and the chief activity of your Communists, is petition-signing.

"Pray permit me to relate you some examples from my own experiences in America. And pray permit me to preface my relation by the statements that, upon inquiry, I find similar experiences to be the lot of most of those visitors foreign to your country whose presence, for any of a thousand reasons, your journals bring to the attention of your public.

"I had, then, but just landed at New York and made my visit to your courteous custom house when a group of young men approached me and thrust before me a paper, requesting that I sign it. Now, I had been signing so many customs papers at your custom barrier that I poised, without thought, my pen.

"However, as there was no ink left in the pen, I had a little leisure to examine this new paper. And, though it seemed official, it did not jump to my eye as touching my own affairs.

"'What,' I inquired, 'is it, this?'

"The young men politely explained that the document was a petition to your chief customs, insisting that he permit entry into your ports of a great work of literature by some alien author.

"'It's name, if you please: that of this work of art?' I ventured.

"Those so polite young men mentioned it.

"'And the name, if you please, of its celebrated author?'

"That, too, they supplied.

"'But,' I demanded, somewhat mystified, 'why does he refuse the book's entry, your chief of customs?'

"With one voice, but many adjectives and adverbs unfamiliar to me, these petitioners announced their opinion that this official of your Government was ga-ga.

"'Nevertheless,' said I, 'I have not read the book and have never, until the moment, heard of its author.'

"These young men then told me that they also had not heard of the author or his work until your chief of customs, by what they called his 'ban,' made it known to them. They denied any desire to read the work, but they declared a mighty resolve that their compatriots should not be forbidden the privilege of reading it if they wanted to.

"By this completely bewildered, I retorted: 'Why, however, ask me to sign? Me, I am not an American.'

"Sir, they replied that that was O. K. and that it was also 'all the better' because I myself was both a foreigner and a man of letters.

"Well, I am a guest of your country, is it not? Yet, when I pointed out to these young men that it would be the height of the impolite should I, as they wished, interfere with the mandates of my host, their Uncle Sam—thereupon those young men abandoned courtesy and said that I was not a man-of-letters, but a 'mere classicist!'

"Sir, I had not been a little hour at my hotel before a similar incident occurred.

"A group of young ladies—strangers to me, but at first charming—came with another paper for my signature. It called upon your Law to liberate some men who were about to be given a sixth trial, after five convictions, on charges of assaulting another group of young ladies.

"And when I made there much the same reply which I had made on the pier—that I knew nothing of the case's merits, that I was an alien, the guest of their Government and its Law—they left me with the accusation that I was a reactionary!

"Sir, no sooner had I reached Chicago——"

But we read no more. We merely glanced at the conclusion—some trash about "the sacred right of petition vs. the popular sport of petitioning."

We are annoyed.

Live there any men (or women) with souls so dead who, getting a glimpse of themselves as "ithers" see them, don't resent it?

The Channel Swim.

THE English Channel swim has been abandoned as a sport event, which is a great pity because, although it produced great foolishness, this foolishness was harmless and even did a few people some good. It also produced some knavery but this, too, was lower-case and caused no harm worth mentioning.

For a whole summer, in 1926, the Channel swim occupied about the same importance and the same position in the papers that is now commanded by wars and persecutions, and surely it will not be argued that these concerns of the present-day are preferable to the heroic feat of Trudy Ederle, who swam the Channel in a gale and was swept up into the North Sea in the dark before she could touch bottom; or even to the exploits of those mock-swimmers who crossed the Sleeve by rowboat later on.

This is not to impugn the achievement of Mrs. Millie Corson, who may be remembered as "the first mother" to swim the channel, or that of the persistent Ishak Helmy, the Egyptian, known as the scow in human form, who finally made it two years later, and, having done so, found himself without a purpose in life. These and several others actually swam the Channel, by hand, so to speak, after Trudy Ederle had softened it up, and are due such honor as their victories deserve, which is little enough nowadays considering that Trudy herself has become a forgotten woman in the city which once buried itself knee-deep in ticker-tape and tore phone books to welcome her home.

THE rowboat swimmers and those ingenuous souls who wore duckfoot gloves and pneumatic union suits all contributed to the foolishness of a craze which was not as crazy as some which have taken first position at the present time.

Only those who were present will retain a proper respect for the heroism of the Ederle girl in fighting on through a storm so wild that much of the time she was lost from sight of those hardy souls who had not turned green and collapsed in the greasy cabin on the chartered tug which accompanied her.

One of these was her sister, Margaret, who went overboard to swim occasional half-hours with her, although she was expectant at the time. Another was Don Skene, since become an author, who intercepted the tug in a put-put from Dover and stepped aboard the bouncing deck with the poise of a dowager at a garden party, clutching a bottle of brandy by the neck in one hand and a bunch of bananas in the other. They had been playing a phonograph up in the bow of the tug to cheer Trudy on her way, and Mr. Skene, advancing to the precise spot where the records were lying on a bench, sat himself unerringly and disastrously on the pile, smashing "Valencia," "No More Worryin'," and all.

THIS was a great mishap at the moment, but Mr. Skene had ventured out in a clam-shell when the skippers of bigger boats preferred the security of the breakwaters, and his reckless bravery atoned for his error. Moreover, he put himself into the game as pinch-hitter for the phonograph and carolled "Don't Sock Your Mother, It's Mean" endlessly to Miss Ederle, who was deaf, and thanked him when she got ashore for having sung "Mother Machree" so feelingly.

There was a Norwegian policeman from Stavenger who popped into the little hotel of the lighthouse on a stormy night when Trudy was training, and, clapping his enormous hands, demanded of Marcel Blondlau, the host, a dozen hard-boiled eggs, a rowboat and a lantern as he was swimming the Channel right away and had only time enough to do it that very night. He had only a limited vacation and every hour counted. Against expert advice the Norwegian policeman walked into the roaring sea accompanied by two hired watermen in a boat who tossed him hard-boiled eggs during a wild adventure of 11 hours until he had to surrender to sea-sickness and exhaustion.

THE impecunious baron and baroness down the muddy road who lived in a moldy old house with a cellarful of wine but little food in the larder were cordial to the Americans on the shore and in turn were gracious enough to dine often with them at the hotel of the lighthouse on grass soup and horse meat. There was no light but candle light in the hotel of the lighthouse, no ice, no ice cream and no bath, but there was an artesian beer well which never ran dry and an honor-system bar in which the clients poured their own and made their own change out of the till, reminded by a wall motto which said "Let your conscience be your guide." The baron and baroness were always inquisitive about New Orleans, where they owned a block of tenements which had been in the family when Napoleon sold Louisiana to the U. S. A. They were curious to know why they received so little rent from their American attorney. Were American attorneys uniformly honest?

The greatest swimmer of them all, of course, was Ichy Guk, the Eskimo, who dwelt in the imaginations of Sparrow Robertson, of the Paris Herald, and Bill McGeehan, of the New York Herald Tribune, at Harry's New York bar in Paris, but never entered the Channel because the water never was cold enough for his liking. They daily read the official temperature and when Trudy and the rest were shivering on the shore, the guardians of Ichy Guk would solemnly announce that he could not swim today for fear of being scalded. He was still waiting for an old-fashioned winter at last reports.

December to Marry July

By the Associated Press.

Old Forge, N. Y., July 24.—Charles Jeannette, 98-year-old Civil War veteran, who believes one should marry before reaching 100, is quietly preparing for his third wedding this fall.

Although it hasn't been formally announced, the consensus is that the bride-to-be is a 47-year-old Wilmington, Del., widow who has visited the veteran at his little cabin on the shore of Moose River.

Last May, while celebrating his ninety-eighth birthday, Jeannette announced he intended to marry again before he was 100 years old and since then proposals from widows and spinsters in all parts of the country have flowed into Old Forge.

Jeannette, with some very definite ideas on the marriage question, immediately began sorting out the likely candidates and inviting the most promising to visit him. To date, seven women have accepted the invitations.

Haiti And The World

Jailing Of Italian Citizen Representing American Interests Illustrates Complicated Interrelationship Of Caribbean Nation With Politics And Commerce Of Outer World.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Port au Prince (By Mail).

THE dictatorships in Haiti and Santo Domingo have international repercussions and complications which affect the interests of the United States. In May of this year President Rafael L. Trujillo, of the Dominican Republic, threw into prison an Italian citizen who represented certain American interests in the republic and who filled an honorary diplomatic post as well. It was alleged that the gentleman in question was competing with a commercial monopoly of the Dominican President. Premier Mussolini made official protests, but fortunately the affair blew over though not until after the victim of Senor Trujillo's displeasure had spent several days in a dungeon with water up to his ankles and where he could neither sit down nor rest.

Shortly afterward, the secretary, or aid, of one of President Trujillo's stanchest opponents, who has been in exile in the United States, was assassinated in New York City. It is surmised that the bullet was intended for the President's exiled rival and that the assassination may have been inspired in Santo Domingo itself.

As a result of the publicity and of the pressure brought to bear on the President-Dictator, he has proclaimed an entente and issued, through his consulates and legations abroad, a notice to the effect that political exiles may return to Santo Domingo.

PRESIDENT VINCENT, of Haiti, and President Trujillo, of the Dominican Republic, have exchanged visits. On one of these presidential excursions boundary difficulties between the republics were adjusted. Closer relations between these nations are being cultivated and means are being sought to bring them physically closer to—sailings by small steamers or long, arduous automobile trips over roads none too good—not to mention as carriers the ubiquitous donkeys and small horses—were the sole means of getting from one capital to another. Now frequent plane connections exist and these two peoples can come to know each other better.

The relations of Haiti with the outside world have been improved in one direction and worsened in another. Reminiscent of the intervention in Haiti, which ended in August, 1934, is an American fiscal agent who acts as adviser to the Haitian government on economic and fiscal matters. The National City Bank has been Haitianized to the extent that it is now called the National Bank of Haiti, and has two Haitians on its board of directors—two of the others represent the American bondholders of the 1922 loan, and two the National City Bank. The marines are out of Haiti and a trade agreement between Haiti and the United States has been signed.

The latter has been causing much discussion. It is claimed in some quarters that the Haitians stultified themselves at Montevideo when their delegates agreed to Mr. Hull's plan of trade agreements which should include the most favored nation clause. And to understand this point and the present difficulties with France a word must be said about the background of Haiti's commercial relations.

HAITI, ever since 1697, has had close connections with France. First, French pirates and buccaneers used the country as their headquarters, and then, in the year mentioned, Haiti was ceded to France by Spain. Even after Haitian independence, in 1804, close contact was maintained with France, whose language the cultured Haitians speak and whose civilization, in many respects, they have borrowed or imitated. France has borne the same relationship to Haiti as that which Spain and Portugal maintained toward the Portuguese and Spanish speaking nations of the New World.

In the case of Haiti the very strong sentimental bond however was vastly strengthened by an economic relationship which is now being threatened. For more than a century France has bought the bulk of Haiti's coffee, not merely for consumption in France but for distribution to other parts of Europe. Haiti enjoyed an extremely beneficial tariff preferential in Le Havre. All told, France has been buying more than 50 per cent of Haiti's exports and has sold her, in exchange, only 5 to 6 per cent of her imports. The trade of Haiti with the United States is just the other way around, Haiti buying much more from us than we buy from her. And the percentages, in reverse, are about the same. Thus it would seem that a prosperous trade with France would benefit the American exporter. He is paid with the exchange which France's purchases net the Haitian importer.

After Haiti signed the trade agreement with the United States France protested because of the most-favored-nation clause even though a similar clause is found in the Haitian-American treaty of July 8, 1926. In addition to her protest, France has added a long list of products she wishes to have enter Haiti under preferential conditions and has also demanded that Haiti repay the loan of 1910 in gold—an entirely new factor in the situation. Many other nations have trade agreements with Haiti similar to that of the United States and these, too, would be hurt or embarrassed if the French demands were acceded to.

NEGOTIATIONS with France are now at a standstill and there is much pessimism in Haitian business circles about the economic future of the country. Haitian coffee no longer enjoys its preferential in France and French products entering Haiti are now taxed under a new tariff bill recently enacted to exclude Japanese products. Haiti, however, is attempting to diversify her production and to find new markets for her coffee. Five new Fiat automobiles just arrived from Italy as a result of a new trade agreement with that country are objective evidence that Haiti is finding new markets for her coffee and for her purchases.

Wild rumors are rife as to the causes of the quarrel between France and Haiti. Some believe the Vincent dictatorship stupid or dilatory or both. Others blame American interests. Others see in the situation a small segment of the world fight for markets. More measured opinion suggests that France may be using Haiti to test Secretary Hull's whole theory of foreign trade and especially the most-favored-nation clause, while others believe that this is a new French technique to fight depreciated currencies and still cling to the gold standard.

The situation is slightly complicated. The commercial interests of many nations are involved, as are their diplomatic ties. Furthermore, the American bondholders of the 1922 loan have been given certain assurances that their interests will be safeguarded. From her trade with France, Haiti has received much of the exchange which she has used to pay her foreign debts and the balances on her trade with the United States. Any drastic reduction in Haitian exports either through mismanagement in Haiti or because of an intransigent attitude on the part of France will have serious repercussions in the United States as well as in Haiti itself. And until the true case of France is known the future will remain uncertain.

No End of Books

By

Uno, Zwei, Trois, Cuatro.

IF ANY of you happen to hear me going around and muttering below my breath. "Alif, Be, Te, Se, Jim, He, Khe," and so forth, do not be alarmed. I am merely practicing the alphabet in Arabian. Or if you hear: "I, Erh, San, Szu, Wu," that is merely counting 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, in Chinese. And if sounds like these come forth. "Ahad, Ithnain, Thalatha, Arba, Khamis, Jum'ah, and Sabatu," know that I do nothing but recite the days of the week in Malay. And "Sabatu" has you fooled—that's Saturday, not the Sabbath.

For linguistic learning has descended upon me in great gobs. In such spare time as I can find, I labor at inditing Russian script, which is a very tasty alphabet and has some cute characters in it. Wearied of that, I go on to the months of the year in Gaelic—I can't pronounce them yet, but I maintain hopes. Then in a twinkle I turn to the handsomest array of characters on earth, those used in the Tamil language, a speech of glugs and counter-glugs indulged in by the inhabitants of the Madras Presidency, Tanjore, Tinnevelly, etc., and etc., and the coffee and tea districts of northern Ceylon—characters, I say, which for sheer involved and curlicued beauty have everything else beat a mile, including the Burmese, Armenian, Ethiopic and Javanese.

And I trust you're properly impressed. But you can have all I know in these matters, or expect to know, for the modest price of $1. I refer to one of those amazing books which our Government produces so quietly—"Foreign Languages: for the Use of Printers and Translators: Supplement to the Style Manual of the United States Government Printing Office: Second Edition Revised and Enlarged," by George F. von Ostermann, foreign reader of the G. O. P. I tell you it's a volume this blase book-reviewer would have been glad to buy with one good round smacker, if it hadn't turned up so courteously on his desk.

"DEAR ME," I hear you say, "but how obscure a little book to touch upon!" Madame or Sir, I beg your pardon. The first edition of "Foreign Languages" went around the world, and became as famous to the profession of bibliography as Dun & Bradstreet is to financiers. In London, front office of more languages than any other town on earth, and in Berlin, where by long repute they have the study of philology sewn up tight, similar books have appeared, but experts declared they had never seen anything like Mr. von Ostermann's volume, and they bought I don't know how many dozen copies for governmental use. For a quarter-century the author has been the G. P. O.'s tycoon of foreign tongues, and the fruit of that experience is compressed into these 230 pages.

Briefly, what we have is a schematized presentation of 96 of the world's languages (from Tagalog, which is what they chatter in the Philippines, to Glagolitsa, a Central European language which flourished around the ninth century and died out about 1840)—in each of which the author gives the alphabet in native characters, their native pronunciation, their transliteration into our equivalent sounds, the extent and use of the language, and in most cases the accents, capitalization, punctuation, syllabication, common abbreviations, cardinal and ordinal numbers, the days, seasons, and months, and certain bibliographical terms.

Which is a rather heavy way of saying that if you ever got a letter in Devanagari, the alphabet used in Sanskrit, Hindustani, and many modern Indian languages, you could take this book and spell out the odd characters into English phonetics, and since in Devanagari the words are spelled exactly as they sound, you could at once translate by means of a Devanagari-English dictionary in English characters. Does that satisfy you?

But to a more common point, it is extremely useful, especially in a polyglot city like Washington, to know how to pronounce Swedish or Dutch names, or to know how the odd diacritical marks over plain English letters affect the sound in Czech, Finnish, Hungarian, Latvian, Polish, Slovak, and so on. You are even instructed how to make your way through such a Welsh word as "trydyddardde," which means "thirteenth."

AND then, perhaps, you will be amused by little points, such as the fact that Armenian has a perfectly good syllable pronounced "worm," that the Chinese have one kind of numerical figure for ordinary use, and a much more complicated form for use on such things as pawn tickets, where there might be alteration; that the Ethiopians call their language "Geez;" that the Mongolian word-order is almost the reverse of English; that Polish has six words consisting of but one letter—"w," in; "z," with; "i," and—or also; "a," and; "o," about; and "u," by; and that Uighuric, an ancient Turkish language, is probably the hardest to read in the world, as you can scarcely distinguish the characters apart with a magnifying glass.

Dare I, in the face of such learning, make one query on fact? But I am curious and should like Mr. von Ostermann to give me an Hawaiian word, not a modern English transliteration, with the diphthong "eu." I never laid eyes on such. But anyway, as we used to say in the island, "Maikai, maikai, buke, Mista Ostermann!"

Girl Seeks Another Million

By the Associated Press.

Vernon, Tex., July 24.—Rich Thelma Mills, who likes to work in boots and trousers, is back seeking "another million" in the oil fields—and confident she'll get it.

In August of 1924 Miss Wills, believed to be the first successful woman operator in the oil business, brought in a well that she sold a year later for $1,250,000.

A native of Norway, energetic Miss Wills emigrated to the United States when a girl and soon entered the petroleum fields. Clad in riding trousers, shirts and boots, her hair flying in the Panhandle's winds, she worked tirelessly.

Squirrels Ruin Wires

By the Associated Press.

Monroe, Ga., July 24.—Hungry squirrels chewed into a half mile of cable and put a number of telephones out of order here.

Telephone company officials said it would cost $1,000 to replace the ruined cable. It has been dry here several weeks and the damage was not noticed until a heavy rain shorted the wires.

The squirrels were a common sight frisking about the cable but no one had any idea they were making a meal of the lead covering.

Venus stepped down from her pedestal at the Corcoran Art Gallery and sighed enviously. There was a wistful look in her eyes as she patted her hair back into place.

"You don't know what breaks these modern women get," she moaned. "Now, in my day, things were different."

We leaned against a glass case and listened to her plaintive tale.

"Why," she continued, "when I wanted vanishing cream or a new lipstick I had to send that flighty daughter-in-law of mine, Psyche, over to Proserpine's house across the River Styx to get it and, would you believe it, I tramped all the way from Olympus to the Parthenon without finding a single decent Beauty Shoppe! And you know how catty those Athenian newspapermen could be. That awful Aristophanes, who had that scurrilous column in the Daily Gazette, actually said that if I got another wrinkle my face would look like a prune skin.

"But these modern women have all their beauty and personality problems solved by Frances Mangum, of The Washington Post, and she knows ever so much more about beauty than I did." She smiled shyly. "But then, I had my moments. There was that dear boy, Praxiteles . . ."

Well, since Beauty is Truth, Venus was right: Miss Washington does get a break. All she has to do to keep her nose from being shiny or her chins from doubling is to follow Frances Mangum's advice in The Post. Frances knows her cosmetics, whether they're to be used to please a sweetheart, hold a husband, or make the blonde next door jealous. She tells you where to get 'em, how to apply 'em, and when the date is over, how to peel 'em off. In short, Frances' column is the answer to a perplexed maiden's prayer.

And Handsome being what Handsome does, Frances also advises you on ways to develop your personality . . . how to acquire that charm which will make men want to shower you with attentions . . . and other women long to cut your throat. Even Madame de Stael could have profited from our Frances' column.

If you have wrinkles instead of dimples . . . circles instead of curves . . . girl-friends instead of boy-friends . . . let Miss Mangum tell you the reason why. Follow her advice and you'll have that movie-actress figure . . . that peaches-and-cream complexion . . . those come-hither eyes . . . and a lot more fun. Her column is found each Sunday on the Household Pages of

The Chairman of the Board

MAKES A REQUEST

LAST September at a Directors' Meeting of the American Oil Company, the Chairman of the Board made a request. He said: "Gentlemen, I want to talk a few minutes on a subject very close to my heart. You know, next year—in July 1935—we celebrate the 25th Anniversary of our company.

"As we look back at our small beginning and the progress made in 25 years, we should realize one thing. We owe much of our growth to the motorists who bought and liked our products. I feel, in celebrating our anniversary, we should do something that further merits the continued support of those motorist friends.

"We have a new refinery that's the last word in every respect. Our chemists have a lot of new ideas. Let us put both refinery and chemists to work on some new things. Let's first try to improve Amoco-Gas—if that is possible. And then let us bring out a new regular gasoline—something modern, different from and ahead of any other regular gas on the market.

"Perhaps we will be asking a lot; I imagine most of our people think we are turning out just about the best products it is possible to produce. But for this important 25th Anniversary year, let us strive still further to better both of these products."

THE ANSWER . . .
TWO SILVER ANNIVERSARY ACHIEVEMENTS!

MARCH 1935! GREATER AMOCO-GAS!

The opening achievement for American's 25th Anniversary! An improvement in the famous Amoco, the original special motor fuel that holds more official world's records than any other gas or motor fuel. Hundreds of thousands of motorists have proved to themselves that GREATER AMOCO-GAS is the biggest gallon of motor fuel on the market. It takes less fuel to get more results.

JULY 1935! ANNOUNCEMENT SOON!

In a day or two, announcement will be made of our second achievement for American's 25th Anniversary. It's a radical improvement in another famous American Oil Company product—Orange AMERICAN GAS. This new regular gasoline is different from and superior to any other regular gasoline on the market. Watch for our announcement! It means a lot to your motor and a lot more to you! It's a real new note in regular price gasoline!

Capital Set Is Enjoying Boat Parties

The Gilbert Grosvenors Leave Bethesda for Nova Scotia.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

With Chesapeake Bay so accessible and the Potomac River at their doors, it is strange that so many Washingtonians seek other places for their summer boating. But in spite of the many who go to Newport, Bar Harbor, Narragansett, the North Shore and a dozen other watering places, numbers still keep their boats in the Potomac and content themselves with short trips every week-end, and frequent evenings during the week when they cruise to Mount Vernon or Alexandria, depending on the speed of their crafts.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Snow, jr., have a beautiful cruiser, which is the delight of their friends. Several times a week gay little parties gather at the Cointhian Yacht Club and put out into the river for a run to Mount Vernon, where swimming is the order of the day. Then there is supper aboard the Madelon and usually a long evening of singing, until the guests think the city has cooled sufficiently for them to return. Mrs. Snow and her young daughter, Claire, are planning to leave shortly for Colorado to spend a month in the mountains before going to California. They expect to be absent until October.

Ryan Frequent Host.

Mr. William Ryan also has a splendid boat aboard which he entertains at similar parties, and Mr. and Mrs. William Gwynn Gardiner, with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gwynn Gardiner, jr., also entertained frequently on their yacht, the Squire.

Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor and their daughters, Carol and Gloria, have left their home, Wild Acres, in Bethesda, Md., for their summer place at Baddeck, in Nova Scotia, which has the quaint Scotch name, Beinn Bheagh. Their sloop yacht, the Elsie, is constantly seen drifting in the cold blue northern waters.

Their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Grosvenor, have a cottage at Gibson Island, Md., where they spend the summer, and sail both in the bay and in the lovely Magote River, which cuts the island from the mainland.

Dr. and Mrs. Daniel LeRay Borden have a summer home, Utowana, at Chaumont, N. Y., where the former spends fleeting holidays and where Mrs. Borden and their sons remain all summer enjoying excursions on the lake in either their sloop, Tonka, or cruiser, the Polly.

Mrs. Johnson in Maine.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Frost have gone to their summer place at Woods Hole, Mass., and like all vacationers at Cape Cod, spend much of their time on the water aboard their schooner, Penzance.

Mrs. Loren Johnson has gone to her summer home, the Birches, at Southwest Harbor, Me., on beautiful Mount Desert Island. Dr. Johnson will join her later. Mrs. Johnson, an ardent sailor, puts out to sea every afternoon in her schooner, the Lorine, usually with a party of friends who remain aboard for supper and return either in the brilliant northern sunset, or if later there is a moon. Dr. Johnson's daughter, Mrs. David Barry, wife of Maj. Barry, who has been on the West Coast since last fall, will come East in August with her four young daughters, and will occupy the guest house on the Johnson estate for the remainder of the summer.

There the Pattons had their schooner, the Arcturus, and their sloop, the Ventura, and spent many hours cruising off the North Shore.

Last spring Col. Patton was ordered to Schofield Barracks, T. H., and he and Mrs. Patton sailed from San Pedro in a sturdy 52-foot sailing ship for the Hawaiian Islands. The trip took four weeks, and Col. Patton did much of the sailing himself. Their daughter, Miss Ruth Patton, who had stopped at Fort Riley, Kans., to visit her sister, Mrs. John Waters, followed later by steamer.

Bowen, a classmate of Ensign Hardman, was best man. Ushers were Ensigns Henry P. Rumble, Charles A. Curtze, Jack W. Roe, John S. Coye, jr., James S. Bethea and Robert E. Garrels. Hairpin Proof Bathing Caps Here at Last

New Headpiece Guards Hair Wave from Sea; Double Action Cold Cream.

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

WHAT THIS country needs is not so much a good 5-cent cigar, as Vice President Marshall onceremarked, as a bathing cap which won't go popping to bits at a crucial moment, letting the ocean in to inundate your coiffure. There's nothing so dampening to the spirits, as well as to the hair, as a bathing cap which splits and rips and goes all to pieces just when one has been carefully waved and curled beforehand. And there's no better way to lose a beau than to let him see you with damp and stringy locks. In the first place, it destroys all his carefully nourished illusions that your artfully crimped locks are natural, which is bad, since no man likes to think he has been fooled. In the second place, he gets practically no kick at all out of looking at hair which resembles dank seaweed. So take a tip from your shop hound, and go quickly to a department store here to investigate its new bathing cap which is practically proof against tearing. Most caps, it seems, receive their death blow either from hair pins or bobbie pins. You can't very well go swimming without them, but cheer up—for this cap is absolutely hairpin resistant. Furthermore, it comes all done up in the most attractive little cellophane package, about as big as a minute. You can stow it away in a nook in your purse, and forget all about it from then on. No diving into the depths of rumble seats looking for where you think you might have dropped it, and no more burrowing in a mad search beneath the cushions of the car. It costs only 50 cents, and will make your swim life a lot easier. And, oh yes—in our excitement over the fact that this cap is pin proof, we almost forget to tell you that it's absolutely water-proof, as well.

Skin-Freshener Needed.

JUST AS important as the cleansing cream itself is the use of a skin freshener afterward. After the pores have been opened they must be closed again, so dirt will not re-enter. This same cosmetic house puts out a skin freshener which will close your pores in an eye's twinkling. It differs from many products of this kind in that it removes all the excess oil from your face without removing those valuabe natural oils so essential to a beautiful skin. This skin freshener comes in three prices, $1, $1.75 and $3.

Stunning Chromium Gifts.

THE SMART WORLD is becoming increasingly chromium conscious. The sleek glitter of this attractive material is being utilized more and more for decorative and utilitarian purposes. It is so gay and bright, and besides, it does not tarnish or require cleaning, a boon to busy housewives. An F street store is displaying some perfectly stunning gifts made entirely of chromium, or chromium decorated. The most amazing feature of these gifts is their price; they look like a million dollars and cost exactly $1. Here are some of their choicest items:

Cigarette boxes which hold 50 cigarettes. They're flat, rectangular in shape and come in several different colors. Outlined in chromium is a gay four-masted schooner.

An unusual set of salt and pepper holders. Little and round, they look for all the world like two little silver suns. They come in a special rack and thrive on sea air, as they can't possibly tarnish.

A powder box, painted blue and outlined in chromium. Practical and dainty. Just the thing for your own bedroom or that of a friend.

Harris & Ewing.

The girl who spends all her money on clothes to wear to the office is justified, according to Miss Lita Bane, of the Department of Agriculture Extension Service, who even advocates dressing to please men with whom one works.

Wise Employers Realize Value Of Appearance, Miss Bane Says

Job-Hunters Advised to Buy the Best They Can Afford; Clinics Where Women Can Get Pointers on Style are Forecast.

By Emma Perley Lincoln.

THE MUCH-MALIGNED WORKING GIRL who spends everything she makes on her clothes is justified, Miss Lita Bane, of the Department of Agriculture Extension Service, believes.

Miss Bane even considers dressing to please the men in the office legitimate ambition.

Summed up briefly, the chief reasons for wearing clothes, Miss Bane thinks, are security, recognition, response and new experience.

"Being well-dressed is not a matter of expenditure," Miss Bane said, "for as everyone knows, it's largely a matter of head work. Planning the right colors, the right harmonies, the correct attire for the right occasion, dressing your own personality, these are the things that count.

"A girl who wears her clothes well often is accused of extravagant dressing when she may not have spent as much as the girl, who, for lack of poise and style, is easily overshadowed.

Prefers Well-Dressed Girls.

"In choosing between two girls of equal attainment, ability and merit I would prefer the one who is the best-dressed. She would be pleasanter to have around and probably would be as meticulous about her job as her appearance."

Miss Bane thinks, however, there is such a thing as being too clothes conscious. The girl with this complex will have little attention for anything else.

Of two evils, the lack of clothes consciousness is the worst, Miss Bane believes.

"I once had an assistant," she said, "who was a good example of the latter type. She was planning to be married, so all her money was going for trousseau and linens. She was paid exceedingly well, and could have afforded to make a good appearance in her work, but she looked so unkept I was reluctant to send her on the important contacts which were a part of her duties.

"On the other hand, there is the woman, moderately paid, whose job demands dressing well, and who must spend generously to keep up with its standards.

Clothes Help the Job.

"The foresighted employer of today realizes the importance of this factor, and will pay a clever woman a salary sufficient to eliminate her clothes worries and economies, and leave her time and energies free to devote to the furtherance of his business.

"This is especially true of women in creative jobs, or those which depend upon contacts. The woman half-apologetic about her appearance, or who must spend all her leisure time fixing dresses and modernizing last year's hat, cannot be expected to scintillate with brilliant ideas, nor function 100 per cent in her job."

Miss Bane said that the girl out of a job, if she is wise, will look her very best when seeking a new one, and if possible will spend all she can afford to buy the most attractive job-hunting wardrobe she can assemble.

She thinks a girl who is down and out, and looking the part, is merely doing herself an injustice.

"The job-hunting girl is in an awkward position anyway," Miss Bane said, "so she should remove as many of her handicaps as possible. Few employers have the imagination to see in a wistful-eyed shabby applicant the possibility of an efficient worker."

Beauty Clinics Forecast.

The time when a "beauty clinic" will be taken for granted is not far in the future, Miss Bane believes.

"The girl without that natural flair for clothes may then have an opportunity equal to her more fortunate sister, she asserted." A "clinic" might take charge of a woman's appearance from advising her weight and the color of her make-up, to correcting her poise and the style of her hair-dress.

"In these days, due to economic reasons, when our avenues of costly adventure have been lessened much excitement and fun may be experienced in pleasing our friends and families with our choice of clothes."

Miss Bane is employed by the National Council of Parent Education and the Department of Agriculture. Her many years in the home economics field include service as national secretary of the American Home Economics Association and head of the home-making department of the Ladies Home Journal.

Smart Haircut Recommended When Hair Begins to Turn Gray

WHEN YOUR HAIR begins to turn gray, don't get panicky. Instead go get yourself the smartest haircut you can, and keep your hair more carefully dressed than ever, step out in the most dashing millinery you can find, and act as if you liked it, advises Ruth Murrin, beauty editor of Good Housekeeping.

"Give extra attention to your complexion, your figure, and your mental outlook," she goes on. "Excess pounds, coarse skin and frumpy tastes are far more aging than gray hair. And pay attention to your color schemes. Silvering hair may make it advisable to wear different color than before, and to adopt a new scheme of make-up."

She gives these suggestions:

When a woman with a ruddy complexion, rather fair as to type, with blue, gray or green eyes finds herself at the "brindle stage," she should avoid all reds and bright greens, and wear dark colors such as black, navy or dark green in winter and muted shades, not too light, for summer. Soft tans, blues and grays are flattering.

When the woman with pale sallow skin, blue-gray or green eyes turns gray she should avoid neutral grays, beige and black, and wear warm, flattering colors, not too vivid, such as pinks, lavender, rose beige, and such shades of red as dusty pink, ashes of roses, old rose, raspberry and burgundy, also the soft shades of blue and green.

The woman who is decidedly sallow with dark skin and black or brown eyes, should avoid blue reds, bright blues, purples and greens when her hair turns, and wear instead rich dark brown or red brown and black with white or beige near the face.

N. Y. Hotel Party To Fete Woman, 102

Has Remained in Apartment For Six Years.

Tomorrow will be an important day in the life of Mrs. Laura W. Williams, who lives in a residential hotel in New York City, for she will celebrate her 102d birthday, which makes her the oldest hotel patron in the city. Since moving to her present abode six years ago, Mrs. Williams has not once set foot outside her apartment.

The hotel will present her with a birthday cake, on which they will place as many of the requisite candles as possible. In spite of her advanced age, Mrs. Williams is still active, mentally, and, according to a relative, "reads every paper she can get her hands on."

Garbage Grinder Invented.

A new garbage device which grinds all waste material into a fine powder has been developed and is in use in several cities. It consists of a motor-driven grinding mill which treats all solid matter as a coffee grinder treats coffee. It can be installed under the sink.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have just finished reading your answer to the letter from "M. H. G." on July 20, in which she asked me for suggestions on how to make money at home to pay off outstanding obligations.

To people who are confronting such problems as lack of money to meet their obligations, the first thing I would say is this: They need to learn the laws of negative and positive mind control, which bring success to all who apply them.

It is impossible for the mind to hold a thought without that thought being registered in the body and exerting a definite effect upon it. No creation can take place without passing through positive and negative mind force, as the four great kingdoms of life are governed by this law and everywhere demonstrate it.

* * * *

One who understands this law of his being will never say, "I can't," but will ever be alert and ready for any task that confronts him. Persons can not be helped through physical means alone. What "M. G. H." needs to know is the technique of awakening will power, so that she may receive more of the life current than is commanded by her at present. Then will come the awakening of the positive thought center which gives ability to manage and plan. Positive, decisive mind power and resourcefulness will be hers to enable her to carry out plans she has hitherto lacked the power to accomplish.

* * * *

What we need first to realize is that the universal human lot is, after all, one of the highest privilege . . . I will gladly teach this woman these laws of mind control which have been of great benefit to me. Sincerely,

MRS. F. W. A.

DEAR MRS. F. W. A.: What you have to say is very interesting. You may recall I concluded my suggestions to "M. H. G." with the following paragraph: "I think the most important contribution you can make, under the circumstances, is to get the situation under mental and mathematical control. If there is something else you can better do, your own ingenuity must suggest."

If you can, as you say, teach her certain laws of mind control which will restore her mental poise and enable her to substitute constructive thought for useless worry, you will indeed be conferring a blessing upon her. You will be making it possible for her to develop and draw upon her own latent powers resourcefulness, upon which, in the final analysis, she must depend. Such was the thought I endeavored to convey in my answer. I shall be glad to give your name and address to "M. H. G." should she ask that information.

M. H.

Suggests Child Care.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Since "M. H. G.," the anxious mother who wrote you on July 20, has her own home and children of her own, I suggest that she advertise good home and mother's care for a child or two children. Many mothers would be glad to find a place where their little one would be cared for while they work. Sincerely,

M. S. C.

DEAR M. S. C.: Thank you for the suggestion. I feel sure "M. H. G." will appreciate your willingness to help her find a way out of her present financial difficulty.

Epilepsy Now Being Studied In New Light

Research Reveals Need for More Careful Diagnosis, Cutter Asserts.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE tide that has engulfed the individual afflicted with epilepsy with a well-nigh hopeless outlook is slowly but surely turning. If research now being carried on returns but a fraction of its present promise many of our epilepties will be restored to a life of real usefulness.

A recent report by a group of investigators indicates that the whole epilepsy problem must be re-examined. Of their cases 21.6 per cent were victims of epilepsy-like convulsions because of tumors of the brain.

Those who have lived with epileptics are familiar with the characteristics of the typical attacks (grand mal). Most victims recognize a warning that precedes the seizure. This is commonly called an "aura," a word used by a patient of an old Roman physician, who said that he felt a "wind" just before the onset of convulsions. At first there is a rather severe spasm with violent contractions of the muscles, and the limbs are sometimes fixed in irregular positions. The eyes usually roll to one side and the head or the entire body may be twisted. The features are generally distorted and the complexion, which is pale at first, slowly returns to normal and then becomes deep red or bluish.

Mild attacks, called petit mal, are not so easily recognized, as the patient may lose consciousness for but a few seconds.

For the last few years studies on diets have shown that while most epileptics do well on a regular diet with plenty of fruits and vegetables, some find relief through the employment of the so-called ketogenic or high fat diet.

Ensemble for Summer Wear Workmanlike and Cool Looking

Pattern No. 969.

WHO DOESN'T NEED another simple frock and jacket for warm weather wear? This one has absolutely no furbelows. The square, collarless neck line of the one-piece dress, the simple shoulders, the swagger jacket—they are all workmanlike and cool looking.

Linens, cotton tweeds, novelty cottons of many types will suggest pleasant colors and combinations of colors. The size range of this pattern is 14 to 20; 32 to 38. Size 16 (34) takes 6¾ yards of 35-inch fabric for the short-sleeved frock and jacket.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

Mrs. Longworth Starts Vogue for New England Baked Beans.

By Pattie Ellicott.

BAKED BEANS have been a favorite dish in Washington this season, especially for after-theater supper parties. The person responsible for the vogue is Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

It all started with the supper given by Princess Alice after the annual Stunt Dinner of the Women's National Press Club last March.

The newspaper women are still talking about the bountiful feast of cold meats, salads, hot biscuit, delectable liquids and beans. Everybody ate baked beans and came back for seconds, no matter how much of the other dishes they had managed to consume. The word went forth to other hostesses. Once more the vivacious Alice Longworth had started something new. Baked beans were on the menu at all the really smart houses for cozy after theater supper parties.

New England baked beans were served at Mrs. Longworth's hospitable board—the genuine New England kind, tasting of mellow beans, New Orleans molasses and savory bits of salt pork to enhance the flavor.

Here is the recipe for New England baked beans. This recipe has been quoted from "The Boston Cooking-School Cook Book," by Fannie Merritt Farmer. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston, Mass.).

Boston Baked Beans.

1 quart pea beans
¾ pound fat salt pork.
1 tablespoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon to 1 cup molasses, according to taste
½ teaspoon mustard, if desired
Boiling water

Pick over beans, cover with cold water, and soak overnight. Drain, cover with fresh water, heat slowly (keeping water below boiling point), and cook until skins will burst, which is best determined by taking a few beans on the tip of a spoon and blowing on them. Drain beans. Scald pork and scrape, remove one-fourth-inch slice, and put in bottom of bean pot. Cut through rind of remaining pork every half-inch, making cuts 1 inch deep. Put beans in pot and bury pork in beans, leaving rind exposed. Mix salt, molasses and sugar, add one cup boiling water and pour over beans; then add enough more boiling water to cover beans. Cover bean pot and bake six to eight hours in slow oven (250 degrees Fahrenheit), uncovering the last hour of cooking so that rind may become brown and crisp. Add water as needed. If pork mixed with lean is preferred, use less salt.

This is the first article in a series telling the "favorite food of famous folk," which will appear on this page from time to time. Watch for the next installment.

Furs Set Style In Smart Sets

Capes in Many Types of Pelts Enjoy Record Popularity.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS.—"Say it with furs" seems to be the slogan for smartness in wraps just now.

The fur cape is back stronger than ever in a dozen different pelts and a hundred different models to wear with everything from trim tailleurs to your most splashing evening gown.

Foxes—silver, blue and dyed—beaver, astrakhan, broadtail and mink are being worn by day, while sable, ermine and white fox step out when the lights begin to glow.

Silver fox capes appear in the most varied designs of all. Sometimes the silvery pelts are placed horizontally row on row extending down the figure to the hips, sometimes they are swirled around shoulders in a figure eight design, again worked into big collarlike capes which sweep down the front, the paws clasping around the waist like a belt. The flatter pelts such as beaver, astrakhan and broadtail come in simpler models ranging in length from the waist to a three-quarter cut.

Luxurious elegance marks the models designed for evening wear. Ermines and white foxes worked horizontally are generally cut to about hip length, while minks and sables extend only to the waistline. Some of the darker fur capes are fashioned so that they may be slipped forward on the shoulders to lie against the back of the neck for daytime wear and slid backward to hang from the front of the throat in the evening.

Capes likewise appear in all sorts of fabrics to wear with summer evening frocks. Schiaparelli makes one hiplength model completely covered with rhinestones which sparkle like so many diamonds and another worked closely with pink beads ending in a rose pattern border above a beaded fringe hemline.

Maggy Rouff adds flower-tinted organdy capes to her most formal satin evening frocks. A soft sky blue gown, whose slim line sweeps into a train is topped by a three-tiered cape of blue organdy bound with blue satin ribbon. Lelong splashes brown sequins all over a pink crepe cape which is fairly short in front and swoops down to the knees in back and Patou makes long black pleated chiffon capes completed by black velvet hoods which may be drawn over the head. Hiplength capes of white pique or white organdy finished with frivolous knife pleated ruffles are shown with a number of frocks.

What TODAY Means

"Leo."

IF JULY 25 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

Be careful you do not allow a sense of discouragement to cause a change in your plans, for if you persevere the likelihood is that success will result. Commonplace events are likely to have an indirect affect on an important decision, so do not ignore them. In affairs, involving social or business issues, do not allow fear of giving offense cause you to resort to any form of insincerity. Plain unvarnished truth has never caused nearly so many complications as has falsehood.

A friend may surprise you by displaying a lack of common sense. It will pay you to make allowance for their lack of intelligence by ignoring their attitude. Married and engaged couples, and those into whose lives love has just recently arrived, will avoid trouble if they do not permit a doubt to cause them to question the veracity of any statement that might be made.

If a woman and July 25 is your birthday, your mind is endowed with an intellectual understanding that may give you a clearer insight into many things that are beyond the comprehension of many with whom you come in daily contact. Do not grow impatieent with those who do not quickly grasp your meaning when you attempt to explain something. Patience is a virtue which, when practiced, is well rewarded. You may very well shortly be surprised by an unexpected stroke of good fortune.

You should be greatly admired by members of both sexes. You probably will be much happier married than single, but marriage need not necessarily interfere with your having a successful commercial or artistic career. As a musician, writer, teacher, painter or saleslady, you may be able to gain financial independence.

If a man and July 25 is your natal day, you probably will be successful in all your undertakings if you do not permit discouragement to get the better of you. Scientific or educational work, engineering, journalism, art and salesmanship are among the activities in which you should do well.

Dinner Needs Filled by Salad In Hot Weather

Quickly Made Dish Will Ease Kitchen Tasks; Vegetables Favored.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THERE is some satisfaction in knowing that while the weather is hot, less is demanded of us in the way of menus, that a salad will suffice as the piece de resistance for dinner and that there are many salads that can be prepared in the shade of the morning and be whisked to the refrigerator to wait until the call for dinner.

With the main course out of the way so early in the day, preparing the other dinner dishes seems less of a task. It shouldn't take more than 20 minutes or half an hour at the most to prepare the rest of the meal, especially if you depend on canned soup as a beginning, milk or a hot beverage and chilled fruit and baker's cookies or cake for dessert.

When a salad is chosen as the main dish for dinner it is wise to select either a vegetable combination, or one of seafood or meat. The salads may be either mixed with an appropriate dressing or combined and then set to jell in a piquant gelatine background. Some of the salads are frozen in the trays of an automatic refrigerator. The frozen salads, if very rich, will be more attractive if served in small portions, and are therefore more desirable as salad desserts rather than as the main course for dinner. They may, however, be successfully served as the main luncheon dish. All the frozen salads are not ones with whipped cream basis. There are a few like the frozen salmon loaf below that is a perfect hot weather dish for dinner's piece de resistance.

Frozen Salmon Loaf.

2 cups cold cooked rice
1½ cups salmon, drained and flaked
1 cup cooked small peas
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ cup mayonnaise

Combine ingredients in order given. Freeze in tray of automatic refrigerator about two hours. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with lemon slices. Serve with additional mayonnaise, thinned with a little lemon juice. Serves eight.

This mixture should not be frozen at too low a temperature.

The following recipe for summer vegetables supreme may be prepared early in the morning and set to chill and become firm in a mechanical refrigerator or ordinary ice box.

Summer Vegetables Supreme.

1 tablespoon granulated gelatine
¼ cup cold water
1¼ cups boiling water
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup cucumber, diced
1 cup red radishes, thinly sliced
¼ cup scallions, thinly sliced
1 cup cooked string beans
1 cup cooked fresh peas
¼ cup diced celery
½ teaspoon onion, finely chopped
Mayonnaise

Soften gelatine in cold water. Add boiling water and dissolve. Add vinegar and salt. When cool, add cucumber, radishes and scallions. Turn into large ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Fill center with remaining ingredients blended together. Garnish with radish roses, deviled egg halves and lettuce cups filled with additional mayonnaise. Serves six to eight.

As a salad dessert or for the main course of luncheon try the following frozen salad.

Frozen Cheese and Date Salad.

1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese
3 tablespoons milk
½ cup mayonnaise
½ cup cream, whipped
½ cup dates, finely chopped
½ cup blanched almonds, chopped
2 teaspoons lemon juice

Blend cream cheese and milk to a smooth paste. Add mayonnaise and blend until perfectly smooth. Fold mayonnaise mixture into whipped cream. Add remaining ingredients in order given. Freeze in tray of the automatic refrigerator. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with maraschino cherry rings. Cut in slices and serve with additional mayonnaise if desired. Serves six to eight.

Husband Seekers Taxed.

The shortage of marriageable men at Lungyen, China, has become so acute that young women must pay $5 to the city for permits to seek mates. The levy is called the "young woman's tax." If a woman marries without such a permit she is liable to fine and imprisonment.

10,000 Public Enemies

By Courtney Ryley Cooper.

Chapter XI.—The Hand in the Beam

Crime seems truly to start with the male at 18. He steals more automobiles at 18, followed closely by 19, than at any other time in his life. He robs more from 18 to 23 than at any other time; burglaries also reach their height at 19. Disorderly conduct, drunkenness and vagrancy also are rampant at 19. Criminal homicide reaches its zenith between the ages of 20 and 24. Persons like to talk of hardened old criminals, but it is the hardened young ones who give the law-enforcement agencies of the country the most trouble. Crime rises swiftly from 19 to 24; after that, it begins to drop; even the forgers and counterfeiters slow up at 30; the embezzlers and fraudsters hang on util 39 before slackening.

The female reaches the height of her misconduct at 23. She steals more at 19 and aids in counterfeiting and embezzling best at 24. Her sex offenses are greatest at 22, as well as disorderly conduct, drunkenness and vagrancy. She also robs more and burglarizes more—and kills more. Murders go up abruptly during that year.

These statistics, as gleaned from fingerprint cards, give the answer to the American alibi that all our crime is committed by foreigners. The white American criminals exceed those foreign-born by 47 per cent. After all, the really dangerous criminals of the last few years have borne such names as Nash, Dillinger, Bailey, Bates, Kelly, Sankey, Youngblood, Robertson, Miller, Floyd, Gillis, Phillips, Hamilton, Pierpont, Makley, Green, Underhill, Bird, Bradshaw, Keating and Holden. Only one truly foreign name stands out—that of Richetti.

More than any other factor, the fingerprint today is bearing the brunt of the fight against lawbreaking. Sometimes it fastens the "signature" of a man's fingers on his crime in spite of elaborate efforts to prevent detection. This was illustrated in the case of Odell Carlysle Boyles. For nearly three months, Joseph F. Cannon, of Concord, N. C., received letters threatening to kidnap his two-year-old granddaughter, and his 18-year-old son, Joseph F. Cannon, jr. After a time the Bureau of Investigation was notified and special agents entered the case, working in cooperation with the police of Charlotte, N. C.

Evidently this was not the ordinary extortion letter writer. Time after time, the Charlotte police, into whose hands the letters first went, strove to find fingerprints. There were none.

At last, negotiations got to the point where the extortioners gave instructions for the handing over of the cash. Twelve thousand dollars was to be placed on top of a built-in china closet in a certain vacant house in Hapeville, Ga., and a white cloth attached to the screen door to indicate that the money was waiting. This house had been suggested in a previous letter and special agents had anticipated that it would be designated again.

Therefore, days before the final letter of instruction had been sent to the Cannon family, special agents had gone quietly into Hapeville late at night, and, with flashlights taped until they emitted only a "burglar's beam" of light, familiarized themselves with the premises. More than that, they did a considerable amount of secret electric wiring, connecting the house with a garage some distance away.

Never was a place guarded more carefully or more discretly. Powerful searchlights had been installed in the neighborhood to flood the place with light, should the kidnapers come by night. A high-powered automobile with a special agent at the wheel and another beside him with a sawed-off shotgun was hidden in a nearby garage to speed forth and pursue or block the path of the extortioner's car. When these agents could keep awake no longer, others took their places in relief. Police patrolled the neighborhood, without giving evidence that they were watching this house. There was even direct telephone communication between the hidden agents and police headquarters in Atlanta.

Every airplane which flew over the neighborhood was checked for its license numbers; this place was near an airport. Every automobile which passed the house was recorded. For three days and nights the vigil was kept without results. During that time, persons came and went about the vacant house—prospective buyers examined it, strolling through the rooms and wandering about the yard—but there was no false rush of officers.

Finally, late one afternoon, a slender, well-dressed young woman came up the street, paused in front of the house as though she might be a prospective purchaser, and at last moved slowly to the front door. She looked in the windows. Then, casually, she walked to the rear door.

She entered. A few moments later she opened the door again and stepped forth.

Two special agents faced her. The speed car had roared down the street and whirled to the curb, in readiness for action. The woman stared.

"What's all the excitement?"

"Your name, please?" asked a special agent. "And would you mind telling us just why you happen to have that package of money in your hand? The one you got from the top of the china closet?"

She refused to answer. They took her to a neighboring house for questioning. Shortly afterward they arrested Odell Carlysle Boyles, her husband, a parachute rigger at the Candler Airport near Atlanta.

That package on top of the china closet had been placed by special agents just beneath the ray of what is known as a beam light, installed there as the result of their secret wiring. When the hand of the young woman had broken this beam, in reaching for the packet, a signal had sounded in the hiding place of the special agents. Now there were still another surprise for Mr. and Mrs. Boyles.

They both denied the charge of extortion. The woman insisted that she had received an anonymous letter asking her to go to this house and get a package which would be on top of the china closet. The man denied any knowledge of the plot whatever. In reply to which the Charlotte police took his fingerprints.

Out of a series of 14 letters there had been one in which Boyles had done an imperfect job of glazing. And the Charlotte expert had been able to develop one latent point. With the full set of Boyles' impressions, a comparison was made. The print on the letter matched one of those out of the newly made impressions. Boyles then confessed.

Thus the signature that a man leaves behind him in the commission of a crime arises to identify him. And the records of wanted men wait month upon month and year upon year in the files at Washington ready at an instant's notice to solve a mystery of the past.

What the fingerprint does for the living person it also does for the dead; the amount of money which the Identification Unit annually saves for the law enforcement bodies of the Nation can not be computed. There is nothing as costly as a long search for a hunted man. Until recently those hunts went on, sometimes year after year, without success, for the simple reason that the man no longer existed. Much of that has been changed.

A good example of this was in the notorious Irene Schroeder case of several years ago—one of the first of the so-called bobbed-haired bandits. With a man named Glenn Dague and Irene's brother, Thomas Crawford, she had left a trail of banditry, robbery and murder across America, including the killing of a policeman and a sheriff. At last Irene Schroeder and Glenn Dague were captured in the wilds of the Pima Indian Reservation in Arizona. They had been trailed by Indian trackers, airplanes, men on horseback and even bloodhounds. But Thomas Crawford still remained at liberty. He had left them shortly after the first murder. Irene Schroeder, upon her capture, said he was dead, that he had been wounded in a fight with a State policeman and that they had buried him in the mountains of West Virginia.

The Pennsylvania police, to whom she had been returned, did not believe it. They obtained Crawford's fingerprints from the War Department and prepared "wanted" circulars, one of which was sent to the Bureau of Identification. The search went on vainly. There was no trace of Crawford anywhere.

In January of 1933, four years after the murder, two robbers put their backs to the wall of a building in Cape Girardeau, Mo. where they had been storing the loot from a robbery at Morehouse, Mo. Both were drunk; vaguely they realized that police had trailed them.

"Shoot it out!" said one, thickly.

Guns were raised; trigger fingers tensed; red-yellow fire streaked from pistol barrels. Instantly the guns of the police answered; the two robbers staggered forward, strove in vain to raise their pistols for a last shot, and fell dead.

Apparently they were merely two drunken thieves, brave through liquor, who had lost their lives in an effort to "fight it out with the cops." Efforts to identify them were vain. Then one day the Identification Unit received two sets of fingerprints, submitted by the chief special agent of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway at St. Louis. They were marked:

"Unknown No. 1 and Unknown No. 2, killed in battle with police officers, Cape Girardeau, Mo., January 3, 1933."

Unknown No. 1 was checked. His only record was that of vagrancy, merely a stray in the world of crime. The expert bent above the fingermarks of Unknown No. 2. At last, after a search of the files, he turned to a fellow worker.

"Say," he asked, "they executed Irene Shroeder and Glenn Dague, didn't they?"

"Yes, a couple of years ago. The third member of the gang got away."

"No, he didn't," answered the first expert, and tossed over the fingerprint card of Unknown No. 2. It matched with another from the files—that of Thomas Crawford.

State Lists 216 as Ill Of Paralysis

No Deaths Reported; U. S. to Try Use of Vaccine.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 24.—Two hundred and sixteen cases of infantile paralysis have been reported from 41 counties and eight cities in Virginia since June 1, the State department of health announced today as Federal health authorities made known their intention to experiment with preventive vaccine for the disease in selected localities.

Officials at the State department said they had no record yet of deaths resulting from the malady, as these would be reported by local vital statistics registrars three to four weeks after such fatalities.

Nine cases were recorded today, one each from Fauquier County, Lynchburg and Norfolk, two from Albemarle County and four from Richmond.

Vaccine to Get Trial.

Following a conference with Dr. L. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, Dr. J. P. Leake of the United States Public Health Service, announced vaccines would be tried out in Virginia localities, as was done in North Carolina.

The Federal official emphasized accurate information on results of vaccine was not yet available, but that health authorities are determined to see if the preventive device is of any use.

Dr. Leake commended the way in which Virginia authorities had handled the situation, adding that the outbreak is not intense "as we judge epidemics." He said the disease sometimes reaches a peak in August or early September but warned against undue alarm.

Counties, Cities Listed.

Ten doses of the vaccine are made from one monkey, Dr. Leake said, and the monkeys must be imported from India.

Ocean-Hop Plane Surprise in Test

Clipper Ship Develops Speed of 182 Miles.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 24.—The Clipper ship No. 7, constructed by the Glenn L. Martin Co. for passenger service over the Pacific, today surpassed speeds expected by her designers.

At tests made before officials of the Pan American Airways, for whom the ship was constructed, the giant plane showed a speed of 165½ miles an hour at sea level and a speed of 182 miles an hour at 8,000 feet. Among those present for the tests was Capt. Edwin C. Musick, chief test pilot for Pan American Airways, who was at the controls of another Clipper plane, which made two hops to Hawaii.

Capt. Musick will take his first ride in the Martin Clipper tomorrow. The ship is to make a test flight to Miami next week.

G.O.P. Looks To '36 Fight On Rep. Lewis

Stewart, Nicklin and Kimble Are Among Leading Hopes.

Republicans of the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland, which embraces Allegany, Washington, Garrett, Frederick and Montgomery Counties, are looking forward to the election in November, 1936, and choice of a candidate to oppose Representative David J. Lewis (Democrat) if he again is a candidate. Democratic leaders see no reason now why Lewis should not be renominated.

Political talk insofar as the congressional race is concerned is seldom heard in Democratic circles, but the political bee is buzzing in Republican Party councils in the District. Several avowed candidates already are in the field.

Allegany County, Republican stronghold of the Sixth District, has a large crop of favorite sons, and thus far leads other counties in candidates.

Stewart Among Prospects.

Prominent among these are Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, president of the Allegany Board of County Commissioners and a man whose connections both politically and fraternally are expected to give him considerable advantage. Another is Perry Nicklin, Allegany County treasurer, who also is well known in the other counties of the district. Still another is State Senator Robert B. Kimble, of Allegany County. Senator Kimble is among the younger Republicans and accomplished much for his county in the recent legislative session because of his persuasive ability. He commanded the respect of leaders of the opposite party at Annapolis.

Another Allegany County Republican who has been mentioned for the nomination is Albert A. Doub, who recently retired as a circuit court judge of the Fourth Judicial Circuit. Judge Doub's strength lies in two counties, Allegany County, where he has made his home, and Washington County, where he was born and spent his early life. One group of Republican leaders in Washington County, it is understood, will look with favor upon Judge Doub as a candidate.

Washington County has only one candidate thus far mentioned. He is Mayor I. M. Wertz, of Hagerstown, who is expected to toss his hat into the ring if it appears that leaders of his party are in a receptive mood.

Smith to Run Again.

Montgomery County will have a candidate in the field in Harold C. Smith, who opposed Lewis three years ago. Smith already has indicated to leaders in other counties that he will be a candidate.

With death removing Fred N. Zihlman from the Republican congressional picture since the last election, when he was defeated by a narrow margin by Representative Lewis, Republican leaders are already casting about for a nominee they believe will be popular enough to defeat Lewis. The fact that Lewis is from Allegany County, Republican stronghold in the district, will give, say party leaders, Allegany an edge when it comes to selecting a candidate.

Others Are Mentioned.

The names of several other Republicans of Allegany County have been injected into the discussions of possible candidates. They are former Mayor George Henderson, who was a candidate for attorney general on the Nice ticket at the last State election, and William A. Gunter, former State Senator from that county.

Mayor Wertz has indicated to some of his political friends that he may decide to become a candidate for the congressional nomination. The next municipal election at Hagerstown is not until the spring of 1937 and, should the mayor fail to obtain the congressional nomination, he could be a candidate for reelection to his present office.

Republicans realize that there is going to be a scramble for the nomination and some of them are already quietly building political fences. Several meetings are known to have taken place among prospective candidates, who are seeking to reduce the field and form alliances. None of those who are known to be avowed candidates, however, has shown any inclination to withdraw.

Pony Show Will Draw 10,000 To Chincoteague Isle Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., July 24.—The annual Chincoteague Island pony penning and roundup will get under way at daybreak tomorrow, when a score or more skilled riders and collies will gather in the sand dunes near the island to drive the wild ponies through the streets of the island to a corral where they will be tamed.

By 9 a. m., it is expected, the roundup will be completed and the yearlings, 2-year-olds and 3-year-olds, which so far have managed to eke out a scant existence from the sparse vegetation of this part of the Eastern Shore, will be in the big branding pen.

More than 10,000 are expected to attend the event, which includes an auction with private sales.

The wiry animals bring $20 to $60 a head. Thin, but strong, they average about 13 hands in height and once broken are usually docile and friendly. Most of them are sold for children's pony carts and horse shows.

The pony roundup is the climax of the Chincoteague Volunteer Firemen's carnival, which began last week and closes Saturday.

Indian to Face Action of Jury In Girl's Death

Drowning in King William County to Be Sifted in October.

By the Associated Press.

King William Courthouse, Va., July 24.—A King William County grand jury to assemble in October will investigate the involuntary manslaughter charge lodged against Chief Paul Miles of the Pamunkey Indian Tribe in connection with the drowning of 15-year-old Doris Virginia Melton, of Richmond, on July 4, Trial Justice F. W. Smith decided following a hearing here today.

Members of the Pamunkey and Mattaponi Tribes were interested spectators as witnesses were questioned and Chief Miles, a middle-aged married man, was ordered held under $1,000 bond.

Miss Margaret Martin and Miss Charlotte Allen, companions of the Melton girl on a boating expedition on the Pamunkey River, said the Indian shoved the high school girl from the boat and watched her drown without going to her assistance.

The three girls had gone on a picnic with their families near the reservation at White House, and had obtained the boat from the Indians and secured Chief Miles' services as oarsman.

Miles, who did not testify today, previously had issued a statement through his counsel to the effect that the two girls misinterpreted his move to catch Miss Melton as she left the boat of her own accord.

The defendant, a descendant of Indians who peacefully greeted Capt. John Smith and his companions from Jamestown, was represented by J. D. Mitchell, of West Point, and Harry Smith, of Richmond. Commonwealth's Attorney David Sutton acted for the State.

Roanoke Jury Holds Notary In Vote Fraud

C. O. Paugh Is Charged With Forgery of Mail Ballots.

5 Political Candidates Are Called Among 18 Witnesses.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., July 24.—Acting swiftly upon instructions from Judge J. L. Almond, jr., of Hustings Court, for a thorough investigation of allegedly fraudulent mail ballot voting in this city, a special grand jury this afternoon returned two indictments of three counts each against Clarence O. Paugh, a notary public, and adjourned until tomorrow morning.

Paugh was charged with forging applications for absent voters' mail ballots in the names of R. M. Stump and J. Henry Stump, with uttering the same and with attempting to cast the illegal ballots, a felony.

It is alleged that he persuaded Ruby Stump, 14-year-old girl, to forge the signatures of the two voters on applications for the ballots and that he delivered the ballots to Mrs. Anne Byrd Coleman, central registrar, for voting in the Democratic primary.

Five Candidates Heard.

The indictments were returned after 18 witnesses had been called before the grand jury, including three Roanoke candidates for the House of Delegates and two candidates for the State Senate.

They were Walter H. Scott, candidate or re-election to the House; his two opponents, Marion S. Battle and Raye O. Lawson, and Leonard Muse and Harvey B. Apperson, senatorial aspirants. Apperson is seeking re-election.

Hal C. Tyler, of Radford, third candidate for the Senate seat from the Twenty-first District, was the only one of the six men whose names appear on the primary ballot who was not called, but it was learned that he probably would be called. Presumably the candidates were asked if they had been approached by anyone with offers to deliver support through mail ballots.

Roanoke Mayor Quoted.

In the course of the inquiry the grand jurors sent out for a copy of the Roanoke Times of July 23 in which a statement of Mayor Sydney F. Small was reproduced.

In it he asserted his opposition to "crooked attempts" to use the mail ballot and recalled a statement he issued prior to the primary of April 3, 1934, in which he was a candidate, to the effect that he had been approached by certain individuals who were soliciting mail ballots.

In delivering his charge to the jury, Judge Almond asserted that he was ready "to use the last vestige of power at my command" to break up the practice which he attributed to "political shysters and ward healers." He declared he was determined to end permanently such violations of the election laws.

Grim Richmond Ghost Hunters Vainly Wait for Sight of 'Ha'nt'

Scared Housewife Tells of Fearsome Apparition to Visit Home.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 24.—A band of determined ghost-layers lay in wait at Mrs. George Douglass' West Main street residence here today, hoping for a glimpse of the "ha'nt" she says she saw twice last night.

Mrs. Douglass, who said she saw the ghost glaring through her kitchen door for the first time last Friday night, described its appearance as half-dog half-sheep, with the face of a bulldog and the body of a sheep hound. She said it had ears 2 feet high and green staring eyes.

Last night, Mrs. Douglass told neighbors, police, reporters and some people who just happened to be around looking for ghosts, she saw the creature again—twice. The neighbors, police and reporters had less luck. They did find both the hole in the side of the house from which the creature emerges and prints of great clawed feet in soft earth under the building. But of the strange visitor they saw no sign.

A month ago Mrs. Douglass, her two daughters and two grandchildreen moved into the old house. From the first, Mrs. Douglass said, they were troubled at night by strange thumps and bumps under the floors.

Friday night came a knock at the kitchen door. Mrs. Douglass opened it. She saw nothing. Again came the knock, and again she looked out. Just outside the door, she insists, stood the monster, ears up, eyes glaring greenly, tail erect.

It was, Mrs. Douglass declares, a fearsome sight. But the creature was friendly. At least, it offered no hostile gestures, and so Mrs. Douglass and her family are staying on in the "haunted" house.

"As long as it doesn't bite me," she said. "I will continue to live here. The noise doesn't bother me now."

Baltimoreans BurnUp As Snowplow Parades

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 24.—The appearance of a snowplow on the streets of Baltimore today drew large crowds of sweltering but cheering pedestrians. Somebody even broke into the chorus of "Jingle Bells."

Officials of the Baltimore Transit Co. explained that the sweeper, used on trolley car tracks during the winter, was being transferred from a car barn to a repair shop. The thermometer was well over 90 degrees.

Lawyers Look At Judgeship In '36 Election

Prominent Democrats to Seek Coveted Seat on W. Va. Bench.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 24.—Although the November, 1936, election is still 15 months away, a number of Eastern Panhandle attorneys are making preliminary plans to seek the circuit judgeship for the Twenty-third Judicial Circuit, which pays more than $5,000 annually for eight years. The circuit includes Berkeley, Jefferson and Morgan counties.

Among Republicans there is little, if any, talk of any candidate except Judge D. H. Rodgers, who has occupied the bench for ten years since his appointment in 1925 by Gov. Howard M. Gore and his subsequent election for the full term.

The Democrats, however, have a long list of prospective candidates. Attorney W. W. Downey, unsuccessful candidate in 1928, is expected to be a candidate. Downey works closely with Senator Neely and could normally expect the senior Senator's support in the judicial contest.

Former State Senator A. C. McIntire is generally spoken of by Democratic leaders as keeping a weather eye out for the eight-year seat on the bench, while Attorney Harry H. Byrer, who refused the nomination as first assistant U. S. district attorney for Northern West Virginia, is included among the potential candidates. None of these three, all from Berkeley County, have indicated they are even interested, but their names are always linked when talk on the subject comes up among the informed.

The candidacy of Attorney George M. Beltzhoover, of Charles Town, for the Democratic nomination, also has been discussed.

If Jefferson has other candidates, they have remained well under cover and away from political leaders. Morgan County, stanch Republican stronghold, has offered no candidate for the bench, so far as is known here.

Winchester, July 24.—Plans for a joint picnic of the Winchester and Frederick County Ministerial Associations, to be held at Randolph-Macon Academy, Front Royal, on Friday, August 2, were announced today by the Rev. F. G. Senger.

Girl Menaced By Relatives Of Slain Man

Resentment Balks Her Attendance at Funeral of Father.

Virginia Teacher Taken Back to Jail; Said to Have Confessed.

By the Associated Press.

Pound, Va., July 24.—Evidence of strong resentment by relatives of H. Trig Maxwell against Miss Edith Maxwell, charged with her father's murder early Sunday morning, caused Sheriff J. Preston Adams hurriedly to return the young school teacher to the safety of her jail cell at Wise this morning.

She was brought to Pound for the second time since her arrest to attend her father's funeral, held at p. m. today, but her quick return jail canceled this plan.

Mrs. Anne Maxwell, wife of the slain man, also arrested Sunday, is out on bail and attended the funeral today. Her bond has been reduced to $2,000 from $3,000, as originally fixed.

When Miss Maxwell arrived Pound this morning, she asked see her sister, Mrs. H. C. Robin at whose home their father's body awaited burial. Before the message could be taken and an answer returned, however, Sheriff Adams had rushed the accused woman back to Wise, 12 miles distant.

Miss Maxwell was reported yesterday to have confessed to Commonwealth's Attorney Fred B. Greear that she killed her father when he reprimanded her for being out late. She said the weapon was a work shoe with a solid rubber heel, but a smaller sister, who was an eye witness, said a woman's slipper was used.

The Warners Plan an International Premiere for "A Midsummer Night's Dream"

Special Publicity Planned; New Powell Film Is Fun; Amusement Notes.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Just as the Warner Brothers—First National-Vitaphone organization was first in the field with the cautiously contrived musical screen production that brought this type of film entertainment back into favor after several seasons of disrepute—that was "Forty-second Street"—and first with the new-fangled gangster picture that hides bashfully behind the ample skirts of the Department of Justice—that would be "G Men"—so does it plan to introduce Shakespeare to the contemporary screen in a manner both grand and grandiloquent.

It is the present plan to make a bit of a stir with the picturization of Master Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," when that celluloid product of the imaginative artistry of Prof. Max Reinhardt is splashed upon the screens of the world, come October.

An international premiere in the four principal English-speaking cities of the world is the plan that is now on the fire.

In weather like this, it could be anywhere and still seem to be on the fire, but that isn't the point.

A Quadruple Premiere.

The point is that on October 9, which is by way of being a Wednesday, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will be revealed to expectant publics simultaneously in New York, London, Sydney, Australia, and Toronto, Ontario.

S. Charles Einfeld, director of publicity for the Warner enterprises and a vice president of Vitagraph, one of the numerous components of the Warner business structure, is concentrating his forces this summer upon the preparation of "selling" campaigns on the Shakespeare fantasy that give promise of reviving something of the splendor that attended First National's original exploitation of such pictures as Lubitsch's "Passion," Chaplin's "The Kid" and other hits of the old days.

Nohting like this has been done in recent years, publicity methods and procedures having become monotonously stereotyped and stylized and proportionately without punch.

Others "In The Bag."

This now is all to be changed. And if "A Midsummer Night's Dream" goals them at the ticket wicket, one supposes optimistically that Herr Reinhardt will be recalled hastily from his honeymoon to undertake similar conquests with the Bard's "Hamlet," "Twelfth Night," "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and the other popular Shakespeare plays which Mr. Jack L. Warner, the classicist in charge of Warner Brothers West Coast production, already has boasted he has "in the bag," as Mr. McCormick of the fisticuffing department would say.

This all adds up to a very elegant idea, whether anything ever comes out of it or not.

Not to be outdone in the bestowal of honors upon one of its most popular members, the Early Bird's Breakfast Club outcoloneled the Great Laffoon and commissioned Harry PATRICK Somerville, managing director of the Willard, an admiral of the Irish Navy at its annual conclave, held last night at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

This was no mere honorary gesture that was made in the admiral's direction last night. He had to earn his commission by qualifying at target practice, passing a vision test and wrestling an examination in nautical matters into submission, best two falls out of three.

Having weathered these academic tests with a meager average of 100 per cent, Admiral Somerville was handed his commission by that eminent spinalogist, Dr. Frank T. Shyne, the vertebrate's friend and neck-twister-in-chief to the ailing of the theatrical profession in Washington and a few decrepit newspaper guys, injured in course of duty as members of The Post Sports Department cavalry troop.

In addition to the parchment, Admiral Somerville received complete official regalia, consisting of a Chauncey Olcott cockaded hat, a green uniform with epaulets, chevrons and shamrocks rampant, and one battleship, with oars and plenty ammunition!

This makes Pat the only admiral-colonel duly sworn to represent the District on both sea and land and puts the Early Birds one up on the Great Kentucky Ruby, whom they easily out-Shyne.

Taxicabs—Bronx and Venice.

These gelatin Galli-Curcis and celluloid Carusos all seem to be getting better as time and picture-making go on.

That diminutive giantess of precocity, tiny Miss Shirley Temple, as was remarked in this space no longer ago than yesterday, is miles ahead of "Curly Top," the picture in which she will occupy the silver sheet suspended back of the proscenium in Col. Ratto's —it's the Somerville influence—Palace Theater, beginning day after tomorrow. The same may be said to be true of Mr. Dick Powell, the Warners' eminent canary, in "Broadway Gondolier."

"Broadway Gondolier" is a loosely put together frolic that leaves a few big ends hanging and does not always make sense, but in it Master Dick cuts loose some of the most engaging warbling he has so far scattered along the sound-track.

There is, of course, no use whatever in pretending that Dick Powell is any great shakes, or even a good journeyman Corse Payton, as an actor, for he is not. What he is, is a thoroughly unpretentious and likable young fellow, with a vocal equipment that is practically swell, who has the knack of making an unfailingly agreeable impression in any role that makes no effort to go beyond the conventional emotional range of the typical "singing juvenile."

At His Vocal Best.

"In Broadway Gondolier," which is a mildly cockeyed story of the New York broadcasting studios and the Grand Canal in Venice, revealed to the prying eyes of the drama desks at a private preview in the Earle Theater Building yesterday afternoon, Dick not only toys entertainingly with some whistleable new tunes, but dabbles around a bit with some of the better tenor arias from the grand operas, just to prove that he wasn't kidding last September when he told your present irritation that he was taking a voice lesson every day, when he was in Hollywood, against the time when the films would no longer want him. He evidently has put his time to good use.

There is no present intention, what with the heat, the stupidity, those pesky little gnats, etc., to set down here any complete or comprehensive review of this "Gondolier" business. That will come along Saturday morning, and don't say I didn't warn you. However, there are certain things that may be said of "Broadway Gondolier" at this point that will do no harm.

One is that Bob Murphy, the robust comedian so well known, with his piano-playing son and singing and dancing daughter, on the stages of the Earle and Fox Theaters, where they have played time and again, makes his screen debut in this picture as a singing traffic cop. What Mr. Murphy does to New York motor vehicle congestion would curl Maj. Ernest Brown's hair—theoretically of course, since Maj. Brown—but let's not go into that.

Should Exchange Roles.

Then there is Grant Mitchell, "The Tailor Made Man," in a role that should be played by George Barbier and George Barbier in a role that should be played by Mr. Mitchell. Louise Fazenda comes back to the races in a comedy character that is just as funny as a crick in the neck, and a gondola is propelled miles up and down the Grand Canal without ever getting any farther away from, or closer to, the imposing arches of the Rialto than it was when Dick started leaning on that outsize oar.

But these are purely minor matters in a picture that maintains a mad pace and a merry mood most of the time and, besides, introduces Ted Fio Rito and His Orchestra, the Four Mills Brothers, the Canova Family of hillbillies, the funniest signature song you ever heard and Adolphe Menjou as a dialect character comedian without a superior and with precious few equals.

It is worth the price of admission and Miss Fazenda's indiscretion to hear Dick Powell sing a few "scat" choruses, with the Mills Brothers, of a tricky little thing called "Lulu Is Back in Town"—or something like that.

I suspect that Saturday's review will recommend this as lively and agreeable entertainment, the season of the year being what it is and Joan Blondell being in it.

When the annual dinner for the benefit of the Montgomery County General Hospital, at Sandy Spring, is celebrated in the Sherwood High School on the evening of Friday, August 30, the elaborate entertainment planned for the occasion will be under the personal direction of Brooke Johns, former Ziegfeld star, popular master of ceremonies and impresario of Brooke Johns' Old Barn, out Olney way. Mr. Johns will be recalled as master of ceremonies of the first all-Washington revue, "Going Native," the third edition of which is now being readied for Loew's Fox Theater next month. It is understood to be Mr. Johns' purpose to present a complete floor show at the hospital benefit on his accustomed Broadway scale. Maybe bigger!

The Washington Community Players will present their third offering of the present season at the National Slyvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, next Tuesday night, July 30, when at 8:30 p. m. they will be seen in two brief plays, following a festival concert at 7:30 by the United States Navy Band, Capt. Chares Benter conducting.

This event will mark the tenth consecutive summer festival program presented on the Monument Grounds this season under the auspices of the Community Center Department and the Office of National Capital Parks.

Personal aside to Col. Leonard B. Schloss, vice president and managing director, Glen Echo Park: Knowing your spacious amusement center at Glen Echo to be at least 10 to 15 degrees cooler than town temperatures, what with Potomac breezes filtering through those grand old trees, etc., and being aware that your Crystal Pool is one of the finest natatoria in the country, please take this as fair warning that if the present spell of weather keeps up one day longer you will have to throw out that 3,000th bather to make a place somewhere amongst those 1,500,000 gals. of filtered water—just like the breezes—for yours truly and a keg of spikes—or something.

P. S.—That "gals." means gallons, not gals, as you thought, although that would be all right with me!

Weather Man, Please Note.

How do you mean "Cloudy and warmer"? There ain't no such animal this side of the well-known hinges!

Is Cast Opposite Supreme Egotist

Now it is clear how Martha Sleeper, the smartly turned out young woman pictured above, happened to be selected for the role of Julia Vivian, a persistent sweetheart, opposite Noel Coward's incisive Anthony Mallare in the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur film play of "The Scoundrel," the provocative study in arrogance now occupying the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. You will observe that the wide-awake Miss Sleeper has not one, but two, rabbit foot luck charms suspended from her costume—one from her hat, the other about her neck. It evidently worked, not meaning to imply, of course, that Miss Sleeper is not a competent actress.

Hollywords and Paragraphs.

PERFORMERS fight about their billing and have clauses written into their contracts that they are to receive top billing or equal billing. The studio guarantees many players their billing.

This is taken care of when the "credit sheet" flashes on the screen at the beginning of the flicker. Some players have their names in large type or a more prominent position. In "Anna Karenina," to cite an example, Frederic March shares equal billing with Greta Garbo. It was one of the terms he insisted on to make the picture. The studios control the billing on the screen and in their trade advertisements, but when the pictures start playing the circuits the billing is out of their control.

Then an exhibitor will advertise the picture according to the player in it who is most popular in his district. Often, merely a featured player will be billed over the star who has the top billing clause in his contract. There have been instances, too, when a theater manager will try to hide the fact that a certain star is in the picture. For that star, in that district, actually keeps people away from the box office.

A. C. Blumenthal is said to have gotten 21-2 per cent of the millions transacted in the Fox-Twentieth Century deal as his commission . . . Yet despite this, Peggy Fears has no "Love in Blumenthal" . . . But the best gag to come out of the merger concerns the fact that Fred Allen was signed to make a flicker for Twentieth Century and immediately after signing him they merged with Fox. This prompted Allen to remark that they tried to get more than one company to blame it on for hiring him.

JOHN GILBERT and Renee Torres are romantic . . . Lyle Talbot made a personal appearance at the motion picture exhibit at the San Diego Fair and his speech to the large crowd was: "And I hope that now that you see what I really look like you will still continue to be my fans."

George Jessel was talking about the new show business. "There's no vaudeville," he said. "You either play a restaurant which serves a show as well as food or you play at a gambling casino."

"I was booked in tentatively," went on Jessel, "at a New Orleans gambling place. I didn't hear from the fellow so I sent him a wire asking about it. He wired me back: 'Deal okay if dice is on.'" Jessel's ability as an actor depended on whether the authorities would permit a dice game.

Because of enthusiasm over "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the studio which made the flicker, other supervisors at Warners want to make Shakespearean pictures. One supervisor, who is on a cheap producing budget, asked if he could make "Macbeth," saying it is only a dressed-up Western. Anyway, it is nice to know that the studio has taken up William Shakespeare's option.

When the show, "Let 'Em Eat Cake" opened out of town, Co-author Morrie Ryskind was asked what he would do when the audience hollered, "Author, Author." Ryskind answered: "I'm going to have a revolver with me and fight to the last ditch."

VERA TEASDALE and Adolphe Menjou are working in the same flicker, "The Milky Way," which went into production Tuesday. Miss Teasdale is wearing a blonde wig in the flicker.

In the afternoon Adolphe Menjou came on the set to confer with Director Leo McCarey and to see if he was to be used this day. He noticed the woman with the wavy blonde hair and thought she looked familiar. He gave her a quick smile. He started to talk to Director McCarey. He looked over toward the blonde. She gave him a big smile and made a gesture of greeting with her hand.

"Don't look now," said Menjou to Director McCarey, "but who's that blonde in the corner over there? She's flirting with me." Director McCarey took a peep. "That's your wife," he said, simply.

They are having trouble with the flicker, "The Last Outpost," at Paramount. One of the men concerned with the re-making of it resigned. He told the supervisor the picture was so bad that it would be the start of triple features.

When Anna Sten was on her personal appearance tour, a United Artists exploitation man accompanied her to see that she got plenty of publicity. Miss Sten objected to the interviews and banquets. "I want privacy," she exclaimed. "I don't want to see any more people." The publicity man informed her that this was her public. "I don't care," went on Miss Sten, "I want privacy."

"But they are your fans," explained the publicity man. "Your life is just like a goldfish." "Don't mention that man's name to me," screamed Miss Sten.

Ninth Summer Festival program at the Sylvan Theater, presented by the Gypsy Chorus of Washington and the U. S. Army Band. Program: Gypsy songs by soloists and chorus, directed by Robert Frederick Freund, and a concert by the band, under direction of Capt. Thomas F. Darcy.

"El Capitan" (Robert Frederick Freund), led his gypsy singers onto the stage of the Sylvan Theater last night and for the entertainment of several hundred, who sat on the grass at the Washington Monument grounds in true gypsy fashion, presented a pot-pourri of good old campfire airs.

"El Capitan's" gypsies were better versed, lyrically speaking, than honest-to-goodness gypsies, however. They sang as fluently from the works of George Gershwin, Victor Herbert, and Rudolph Friml as they did from the anonymous works of the folk tune writers. And they were as convincing when they sang the popular song, "Trees," as when they were doing the more traditionally-gypsy "Estudiantina."

However, it was a gypsy program in spirit, "El Capitan," garbed in white blouse and red bandana, singing freely with his colorfully costumed band. And the singers, not bound to the usual formal conduct of choristers, moved about as they sang, and the senors made romantic eyes at their dark-eyed senoritas.

There were dancers too, and as an instrumental feature "El Capitan" introduced "Sylvia"—Miss Sylvia Kaplowitz—for some gypsy tunes on her accordion.

"El Capitan's" full voice soared over the crowd of listeners several times as he gave solos, the most impressive being Schubert's "Ave Maria."

"Benito," the Lawrence Tibbet of the chorus, made a dramatic appearance in the Russian "Nichavo." And "Chico" contributed to the romantic atmosphere with the soft "Serenade" of Toselli.

Altogether there were six soloists. Their real names, not listed with their numbers, are Ann Evans, Erma Calvert and Anne Tresselt, sopranos; Walter Redit and J. Rollins Murray, tenors, and Carrington McCallip, bass.

Edna Lee Freund was piano accompanist and George K. Perkins played the violin.

The dancers, all from the Bekeñ-Deleporte Institute of Dance, were Virginia Barry, Ronnie Cunningham, Margaret Mary Edmonston and Marguerite Reese.

The Army Band gave a half-hour's concert before the Gypsy Chorus came on the stage and added to the romantic atmosphere of the scene by playing Venetian and more gypsy melodies during the intermission.

Next Tuesday night the Summer Festivals will continue with a United States Navy Band festival program and two plays to be given by the Washington Community Players.

Three Killed Sunday Near Chambersburg, Pa.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bedford, Pa., July 24.—As funeral arrangements were being completed by families of two Bedford youths killed in an airplane crash near Chambersburg, Pa., Sunday, Dr. A. W. Thrush, Franklin County coroner, scheduled an inquest for tomorrow.

Services for Glenn B. Calhoun, 21-year-old son of Sheriff and Mrs. David E. Calhoun, of Bedford, will be conducted at Mount Union Christian Church, near Everett, tomorrow morning. Interment will be in the church cemetery. Services for Herbert Foreman, 23, pilot of the plane, son of Mrs. Rena Foreman, of Bedford, were conducted at the Foreman home this afternoon by the Rev. George I. Melhourn. Interment was in Bedford Cemetery.

Charles Leight, 17, of Chambersburg, was the third victim. The accident happened at the end of an air circus dedicating the Chambersburg Airport. Foreman took the two youths aloft to pay them for selling tickets at the air circus. The plane went into a tail-spin while circling over the city and crashed in a vacant lot.

Duchess Apple Harvest Started by Growers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 24.—The harvest of Duchess apples is opening in this section, a number of growers starting work yesterday. The market is not fixed yet, salesmen here declared. Several cars have gone to domestic terminals, and several were being picked for exporting to England, but the amount was insufficient to establish an f. o. b. market.

United States Market News Report for Monday showed Duchess, 2¼-inch, United States 1, delivered at Pittsburgh, Pa., selling for 75 cents a bushel. Transparents, of which few are left, were bringing $1 for the 2¼ inch, and 75 to 50 cents for the 2-inch United States 1.

Annapolis to Keep Express Service

W. B. & A.'s Suspension Not to End Routine.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 24.—Prospects for continued express service between Annapolis and Baltimore were bright today in spite of the announcement by the Southeastern Express Co. that its service would end August 20, when the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad suspends operations.

The Railway Express Agency said that it hoped to continue its present service to Annapolis, and also to establish new stations at Glenburnie, Linthicum and Severn Park. It already has asked the Public Service Commission for permission to inaugurate the new service.

Stations at the points named are now operated by the Southeastern company, with shipping service over the W., B. & A. lines. The truck line which the Railway Express operates to Annapolis will not be affected by suspension of the rail service.

68-Year-Old Dean Is Wed to Librarian

Chestertown, Md., July 24 (AP).—John S. W. Jones, for many years dean of Washington College, and Mrs. Ethel S. Fox, librarian at the college, were married today in Baltimore.

No formal announcement had been made of the marriage, but friends of the couple said that they were married in Baltimore today. Dean Jones is 68, his wife 46. Miss Louise Russell, instructor in music at the college, was the only attendant at the wedding. Mrs. Jones is the widow of Dr. Erroll Fox, who was a professor of chemistry at Washington College, and who died in Munich, Germany, several years ago.

Harris, Myer Banished in Dispute

Griffs' Relief Men Fail; Powell Is Stricken With Cramps.

Cleveland Blasts 7-Run Lead in Finale to Win; Kress' Bat Futile.

By Shirley Povich.

WASHINGTON'S famous relief pitchers, with the kind and eager assistance of the Cleveland Indians, relieved the Nats of two ball games amid wild scenes at Griffith Stadium yesterday.

Those Washington relief pitchers didn't trifle with Washington's leads. They mangled 'em. As late as the ninth inning of each game the score was tied, but when the Nats' relief hurlers had finished with the Indians, and vice versa, Cleveland was in possession of both games by the ample scores of 10 to 6 and 13 to 8.

For most of the five and a half hours of baseball, the 5,000 fans in the stands were in an uproar. They saw such stirring developments as Manager Bucky Harris and Buddy Myer being banished from the first game, Umpire Donnelly permitting a Cleveland player to take four strikes, Outfielder Jake Powell being carried from the field half-crazed with the pain of a muscle spasm in the second game, and the Washington pitchers throwing 33 hits at the Indians.

Kress Redeems Self.

They saw, too, the man power of the Nats exhausted to the point where, in the first game, Manager Harris was forced to call in Jake Powell from the outfield to play second base, and they stayed to see an infielder who had been released to the minors earlier in the day hurriedly recalled so he could make four straight hits in the second game in a grand redemption of himself. That was Red Kress.

But the hilarity of the proceedings was interrupted for ten full minutes in the second inning of the second game when Jake Powell lay out in center field, wildly thrashing about with his arms and legs in the pain of severe cramps in his left leg, not the leg which had previously been affected by an equally painful strangulation of the sciatic nerve.

Turns Somersaults.

Powell had just made a sensational dive for Knickerbocker's line drive into short left field, turning somersaults after the ball eluded his glove. But the applause of the crowd was checked when Powell failed to arise and players of both teams rushed to the spot, knowing well of his chronic leg cramps. Trainer Mike Martin and the club physician administered first aid for 10 minutes before the still struggling Powell was borne off the field.

And then, as if in keeping with the wierd developments, it was discovered that Knickerbocker, who had hit the ball, had been declared out for passing Hale on the base lines when Hale hustled back to first after thinking Powell had made the catch.

In the dressing room, Powell recovered rapidly and is expected to return to the Nats' line-up today.

Before the uproarious doubleheader had finished, Cleveland, too, encountered a serious injury. Running out his triple in the ninth inning of the second game, Joe Vos-

Came Back and—

RED KRESS.

Kress Waived; Is Recalled, Plays Hero

Dropped Earlier in Day; Gets 4 Hits, Won't Go to Chattanooga.

THIS is the story of the darkest hour before the dawn.

Once upon a time (yesterday, in fact), a big league ball player, whom we shall call Red Kress because that is his name, sadly wended his way home from the ball park. It was near game time and a double-header was scheduled, but there was to be no ball game for Red Kress.

What Red Kress' emotions were you are free to guess. He had just been told the news that every big leaguer dreads, news that is as inexoraole as death itself. Red Kress was through—through with the big leagues

The Nats were going to send him to the minors—hot, stuffy Chattanooga, he who had been a big leaguer for seven seasons.

Waived by Clubs.

There yet remained for Red Kress the task of telling Mrs. Kress and their little girl, Lila Lu, that he wasn't a big leaguer any more—that all major league clubs had granted waivers on him, and that his big league salary was no more.

At his Washington apartment, Red Kress mulled his situation, comforted by the philosophic attitude of his wife and little girl. They didn't care, they said. At least, they didn't care much.

Red Kress, however, was thinking that perhaps he'd better quit baseball. The minor leagues were not inviting to him who had once been a major league star. There was probably another profession that—"Ding-a-ling." It was the phone.

"Hello, Red Kress?" asked a voice on the other end.

Needed Infielder.

"This is the Washington baseball park. Mr. Griffith wants you to hurry over right away. You're not going to Chattanooga. Buddy Myer has just been thrown out of the game, Travis is hurt, and we need an infielder. Hurry."

In a twinkling, Red Kress was in a cab. Within ten minutes he was at the ball park. He was too late, however, to get into that first game, too late to prevent Bucky Harris from calling in Outfielder Jake Powell to play second base in the ninth inning.

But Kress was not too late to get into that second game—not too late to play and make four straight hits. Red Kress isn't going to Chattanooga.

Dodgers Get Siebert.

O'Dea Home Run in 11th of Second Game Gives Chicago Margin.

CHICAGO, July 24.—The Cubs won their second straight double-header from Brooklyn today, slamming out a 9-to-3 victory in the opener and taking the eleven-inning afterpiece, 7 to 6, when Ken O'Dea smacked a home run off relief pitcher George Earnshaw. The double triumph left Chicago only one game behind the second-place St. Louis Cardinals.

Charley Root pitched effectively in the opener after the Cubs had pounded Ray Benge for a six-run lead in the opening inning. Chuck Klein hit his eighteenth home run of the season to increase this lead. Bobby Reis, Brooklyn utility infielder and outfielder, tried his hand at pitching in the late innings, pitching two hitless frames.

The Cubs seemed headed for a regulation triumph in the afterpiece when Bill Lee weakened in the ninth and Danny Taylor belted a homer with the bases full to give Brooklyn the lead. Chicago staged a counter rally to tie the count and lead to the eventual victory.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

NO brittle fellow is this Jake Powell, for all his frequent injuries on the ball field. Three times now, they have carried the Nats' dashing young outfielder off the field in pain this season with severe muscle spasms, and the first conclusion would be that he lacks that hardiness that big league baseball demands. There have been others who couldn't stand the gaff, notably Joe Judge, who was fearful of a charley horse every time he made a quick start.

POVICH.

But Powell is not of that ilk. Injured he may be, but it is no reflection on the state of his health or the sinews of his body. Because yesterday the secret of Powell's injuries was discovered—by the Washington Club physician. In the Washington dressing room after the game, the club doctor, pre-eminent in his profession, expounded his theory of Powell's ailment.

"There is nothing wrong with that lad," said the physician. "He's as healthy a specimen as there is on the team. But no man's body can stand the abuse that Powell gives his. Powell's crime is that he plays the game too hard. Did you see the try he made for that ball when he fell and hurt his leg? Jehovah, he was straining every muscle in his body. No wonder he was hurt.

"It was not the same leg that he had injured before, mind you. It was a perfectly healthy leg. But Powell plays the game right up to the hilt. He gives everything he does on that ball field everything he's got. I never saw a ball player so determined, so really reckless with himself. That's the fellow's only sin. He just plays the game too hard. Any fan can notice that. As long as he plays that way, he's going to hurt himself. But what a swell ball player he is."

IN the general excitement over the Tigers and the Yankees, a couple of ball clubs in the American League are being overlooked as the field begins to straighten out for the stretch rush in the pennant race. It is not beyond the realm of reason at this time to include the Chicago White Sox and the Cleveland Indians among the pennant possibilities.

The St. Louis Cardinals showed what could be done in a pennant race when, in less than three weeks, they wiped out a 7½-game lead held by the Giants. Reasoning on that basis, the White Sox, and even the Indians can't be counted out of the running with more than nine weeks of the season remaining.

The White Sox are but 4½ games behind the Tigers, 4 games behind the Yankees, and showing no signs of folding. And they number only one more game than the Tigers in the all-important lost column. The Indians, booted upstairs in fourth place by the Nats yesterday, trail the leaders by 7½ games, not a forbidding margin with more than two months to play.

Walter Johnson's club figures to be as great a threat as the White Sox. At present, Johnson is operating without such pitching talent as Monte Pearson and Oral Hildebrand. When he regains the services of that pair, and with Earl Averill back in his outfield, Johnson will be in a position to make a new and determined bid. And for three weeks they will be playing on home grounds, always an advantage to a Cleveland club.

FOR two days, up in Boston, Tom Yawkey, owner of the Red Sox, has been suffering, and it wasn't from the heat. In gloomy silence he was probably reflecting upon the vagaries of baseball while his Red Sox plopped out of the first division into fifth place, cutting short a brilliant string of successes that almost put them within hailing distance of the league leaders.

The team that has been causing Yawkey all the anguish is the last-place St. Louis Browns, and the specific players who have contributed most to the two Boston defeats are those whom Yawkey's lieutenants, General Manager Eddie Collins and Playing Manager Joe Cronin, traded off to the Browns.

Big Julius Solters, one of the Red Sox cast-offs who fell into the hands of Manager [illegible] Hornsby of the Browns, took the lead in the two defeats of Yawkey's club with his sensational hitting in both games, but he had able allies in Shortstop Lyn Lary and Pitcher Ivy Paul Andrews, two other Boston cast-offs who took fiendish delight in scuttling the Sox.

Yawkey will never squawk. He has spent more than $3,000,000 in rebuilding his Red Sox, but has yet to yelp that he has been gypped despite the fact he now has a fifth-place club on his hands. But a picture of his emotions as he sees former Boston players heap ignominy on his present high-priced crew ought to be worth the price of a bleacher seat, at least.

Don't Worry, Giants and Yanks Will Win Flags, Says Gallico

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 24.—It is hoped and trusted that this message of courage, comfort and good cheer does not come too late to save adherents of the New York Giants and the New York Yankees from cutting their throats or leaping from high places. Old Mahatma Gallico has been in what King Levinsky calls a transom, and the word is that all this great show of strength and ferocity on the part of the Detroit Tigers and the St. Louis Cardinals is just so much midsummer madness.

Transportation to the World Series will still be 5 cents and the Giants will beat the Yankees, four games to two. And what do you think of that? You think I'm nutty. It's

Giants Subdue Cards to Add To Lead

Hubbell Conquers J. Dean in 4-2 Mound Duel at St. Louis.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, July 24.—On the strength of one big inning and the durability of Carl Hubbell's left arm, the Giants today won back all the ground they had lost earlier in their esries with the Cardinals and again increased their National League lead to 1½ games with a 4 to 2 triumph over the Cardinals.

The triumph evened the all-important series at two victories apiece and made it impossible for the Cards to snatch the lead without winning both ends of tomorrow's closing diubleheader.

Hubbell, working with only two days of rest since his 11-inning defeat at Chicago Sunday, gave the 1934 World Champions only five hits and a single earned run as he bested the celebreated Jerome (Dizzy) Dean in a keen pitching duel. Dean did quite a neat job of hurling himself, giving up only seven blows, but he had one bad inning that meant the ball game. It was his second defeat this year at the hands of the Kiants, who he beat six times last season.

Hubbell All-Around Star.

Dizzy just didn't have a chance to do any starring today the way his rival performed. Hubbell not only pitched superbly, but made two hits, drove in one run and fielded his position so well that he cut down several hit possibilities at crucial moments. One particularly fine bit of fielding ended the Cardinal rally that produced three of their hits and their second run in the eighth inning. The tying runs were on second and third when Hubbell knocked down Virgil Davis' smash with his bare hand, pounce don the ball as it bounded away and made a fine throw to Allison Trims Henkel in Crucial Test; Budge Beats Von Cramm.

By the United Press.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 24.—Wilmer Allison, the "forgotten man" of tennis this time a year ago, today went out on the center court at Wimbledon and saved for America the right again to challenge England for the historic Davis Cup.

Weary from his exhausting five-set doubles match yesterday, which took ten pounds off his none-too-ample frame, the Texas "iron man," playing in a heat wave, defeated Heinrich Henkel, 6—1, 7—5, 11—9, to give the United States its third and clinching point in the European zone final with Germany.

When the two players took the court under the broiling sun, Henkel, who hadn't played since Saturday, was fresh and full of power. But Allison, down to 155 pounds, was drawn and sluggish, and Capt. Joseph Wear of the United States forces frankly admitted he was doubtful of the outcome.

Win Essential.

"But he must win," Wear said. "If he loses, Germany will tie at 2 points all, and we cannot hope for Donald Budge to defeat Baron von Cramm in the final match."

Budge did win, 0—6, 9—7, 8—6, 6—3, but it is highly questionable if the Californian would have triumphed over the No. 2 player of the world had the tie been at stake.

Allison, seasoned campaigner, planned and executed a perfect battle. Knowing that young Henkel, with so much responsibility, would be nervous and jumpy at the start, Allison set a blistering pace in the opening set. Henkel crumpled.

The first set lasted 15 minutes as the Texan bombarded his man unmercifully. Swept off his feet, Henkel repeated errors and dropped the first five games. He braced to win the sixth, but Allison blasted out the seventh for the set.

In the first set Allison discovered a glaring weakness in Henkel's armor—his backhand. So, one set up, and knowing he must conserve his strength, the Texan dropped to Bests Ruffing in Duel; White, Cochrane and Goslin Star.

Detroit Moves to Within Four-Tenths of Point of First Place.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Mickey Cochrane pulled another ancient trick out of his magic bag today—old Gen. Alvin Crowder, who is reported to have been engaged in the Spanish-American War, and the general not only mowed down the Yankees, 4 to 0, but he pitched the Tigers within four-tenths of a percentage point of first place in the American League.

Tonight the New Yorkers were still in front, after dropping two of the first three games of the vital series involving first place. Tomorrow's finale in the four-game series, if the weather gets no more erratic than it was today, will decide the issue for the time being.

Allows Four Singles.

Just as old Vic Sorrell tripped the Yanks, 3 to 1, in the second game of yesterday's double-header, so did Crowder soft-ball the local boys to pieces, allowing them but four singles and no scoring opportunities. Two of the singles came with two out, and the last hit, a bunt George Selkirk beat out with one gone in the ninth, faded into nothingness when Lou Gehrig hit into a double play.

The Tigers were in a ferocious hitting mood, clubbing Big Red Ruffing for 11 hits, four of them doubles and one of them—a home run by "Jo-Jo" White, which came in the first inning.

Mickey Cochrane drove in the second run, and ancient Goose Goslin the last two in a three-run rally in the third that ended the scoring.

Rain Delays Contest.

The game was delayed 35 minutes in the second inning because of a thunder shower that soaked the field, and the delay seemed to ruin Ruffing's effectiveness, if any. He walked Marv Owen, the first man to face him in the third. A sacrifice and a fly left him on second with two out, but Cochrane's single scored him, Charley Gehringer's single and a walk to Hank Greenberg filled the bases, and Goslin settled the matter for the day by driving two more in with a single to right.

Purple Knight Wins at Suffolk Downs, Sets Track Record

Vanderbilt Horse Comes From Behind to Score First of Year.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 24.—Purple Knight, bearing the cerise and white diamonds of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, negotiated the mile route of the midwek holiday feature, the Paul Revere, in the track-record time of 1:39 to win by a head over the Belair Stud's Palma in a finish that thrilled the 18,000 crowd.

It was the first vicory of the year for the winner and he had to come from the ruck at the head of the stretch to win.

The favored Sanctity, a 2-1 choice, was unplaced. Spixi broke out of the gate in front, but Time Flight showed early speed and cut across the field to take the lead at the first turn.

Spixi had enough left after his early rush to capture the show position from C. V. Whitney's Motto by a length.

Empire City, N. Y., July 24 (AP).—Mrs. L. H. Nimkoff's Legionary, the filly that won here last Thursday when quoted at 25 to 1, was unable to repeat her winning performance today at odds of 13 to 10. The daughter of Cohort found W. A. Jones' Boston Brook, second choice at 9 to 5, too much for her and bowed to that colt by two lengths in the Stanwich, a class "C" handicap. The Orienta Stable's Frank Ormont was a half dozen lengths farther back in third place.

Boston Brook, running back to a good recent effort, was aided somewhat by a shower that fell earlier in the day, leaving the track slow. The son of Bostonian completed the mile and a sixteenth in 1:47 3-5.

Legionary began in a manner to indicate she would race to another triumph. Kempton Knott hustled her around the first turn with daylight to spare, but, after straightening out on the back stretch, Boston Brook rushed past the filly as if she were tied. Johnny Longden then took Boston Brook under wraps and his mount never needed to be let down thereafter, Legionary failing to make up ground under the whip. Frank Ormont, many lengths out of it early, easily passed Cold Shoulder and Bernita II in the stretch to gain the show award.

FREE AGAIN went into command immediately, drew clear in the first furlong and, dominating the running throughout, was never seriously endangered. GLYNNA, hustled along on the outside closest to the winner all the way, held on stubbornly at the end. SKY PIRATE moved up gamely in the last three-sixteenths. FLOWER SHOW went into contention soon after the start, and raced well placed to the end. MANNERLY, caught in close quarters approaching the far turn, was forced to take up sharply and never could reach the leaders thereafter. COUNTER PASS was shuffled back in the first few strides. BROWBEATEN never was a serious factor.

TREASURY KEY displaced speed from the start, disposed of KINGS PLEASURE, swerved in the stretch, bothering GLYNDON BELLE, for which he was disqualified. GREAT LOVER, never far from the lead, closed going willingly through the last furlong. MARMARA moved up stoutly, made a determined bid to reach the pacemaker, was not good enough, though fighting it out courageously to the end. HIGH HAND II, early-speed willingly in the drive. LITTLE DINAH, under slight restraint early, was unable to enter into serious contention when called upon. TRULY YOURS made up some ground. KINGS PLEASURE, much used in racing with TREASURY KEY, faltered in the last quarter-mile. GLYNDON BELLE was under steadying restraint while following the pace, was moving up stoutly when, suffering interference, stumbled and unseated Stevenson.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:43. Winner, Mrs. J. CANCEL, placed all the way on the inside, made a determined effort to reach the leader, moved up briefly, but was not good enough to overhaul the leader, weakening slightly in the last sixteenth. TUDOR QUEEN, well placed from the start, faltered in the closing furlong. HOT GRIDDLE closed some ground and was going stoutly at the end. PLAYAWAY went evenly. JOE MAC was never prominent.

Shore Extends Welsh as Upsets Mark Public Parks Tennis

Markey Downs Latona; Mrs. Turney Beats Mary Ryan.

By George Considine.

OLD MAN DOPE was sent scampering into Rock Creek Park with his tail between his legs yesterday as the annual Public Parks Tennis Tournament produced an unprecedented series of upsets. Up until yesterday tournament officials stood around, "I told you soing," but they certainly had to eat those words.

The most stunning of these form reversals was the near defeat of Barney Welsh, local and national Public Park champion by eighth seerer Frank Shore. Welsh finally won, 6—3, 3—6, 7—5. Time and again Shore's tantalizing chop strokes forced Barney to err.

Having divided the first two sets, each man won his service up to 4-all. And then, wonder of wonders, Frank crashed through the champion's powerful delivery and had but to hold his own to account for the greatest win of his career. At this point, Welsh launched a barrage that completely smothered the youngster. The Rockville star proved himself a really great champion by clicking off three games in a row for the match.

McElvenny Beats Mitchell.

Ralph McElvenny threw caution to the proverbial winds, pummeling Dooley Mitchell about with willful abandon to score an upset, 6—3, 6—1, 6—4. The curly-haired Georgetowner, wearing his first tennis shorts, seemed a bit self-conscious and after winning the first set at love, never was capable of withstanding McElvenny's all-court attack.

Considered by the experts to be an underdog in his match with Bud Markey, fiery Tony Latona produced the most sensational tennis of the day as he ran roughshod over the former Notre Dame net captain to win with ease at 6-4 6-2. Big Bill Breese completed the semifinal bracket, pounding out a bristling victory over Hugh Lynch, 6-4, 0-6, 6-2.

In the women's division Bobsey Turney, fresh fro ma very favorable showing in the West Virginia State championships, continued the upsetting vein by trouncing second-seeded Mary Ryan, 6-3, 6-1. Others to reach the semifinals along with Mrs. Turney were Sara Moore, Betty Kronman and Kay Johnson.

Bitzenbergs in Lead.

As darkness terminated the day of the underdog, another upset was in the making, when those two precocious Ritzenbergs—Nate and Allen—led the highly touted team of Frank Shore and Tony Latona, 1-6, 8-6, 3-1. The match will be continued at 6 p. m. today.

Semifinals in both men's and women's divisions will be played at 5 o'clock this afternoon. Barney Welsh will oppose Tony Latona, while Ralph McElvenny locks racquets with Bill Breese. Sara Moore faces Betty Kronman and Bobsey Turney is pitted against Kay Johnson.

Harrisonburg Nine Wins in League, 5-1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 24.—Harrisonburg started off the second half of the Valley League last night with a 5-to-1 victory over Charlottesville.

A big first inning in which Harrisonburg registered four runs on hits and wildness by Lefty Kerr, on the mound for Charlottesville, accounted for the victory.

Harrisonburg obtained only five hits off Kerr but made them count. Red Proctor, on the mound for the winners, allowed ten hits but kept them scattered.

Hugh Sutton, Harrisonburg left fielder, was the star of the game with two triples. He contributed a perfect peg to cut off a runner at the plate. In this inning, Charlottesville collected three hits and was given two walks, but scored only one run.

Horse Attempts To Swim Atlantic

By the United Press.

Boston, July 24.—After an unsuccessful attempt to swim the Atlantic, Cathop, veteran race horse, was bedded down firmly in his stable at Suffolk Downs today.

Taking advantage of a recent police order permitting equinine surf bathing at Revere Beach, Paul Codd, owner of the 6-year-old bathing beauty who boasts relationship to Mike Hall, Agua Caliente Handicap winner in 1931, took his charge down to the besch for a dip.

After testing the ocean temperature and filling his nostrils with salt air, the veteran of five years' turf campaigning suddenly struck out with bold strokes for Europe and soon was a mere blotch on the horizon.

Stablehands towed him back to shore under vigorous protest. His training henceforth will be restricted to workouts on the flat.

Upsets Feature Seabright Net Play

Mrs. Fabyan, Ousted With Miss Babcock; Men Favorites Win.

By the Associated Press.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 24.—The series of upsets which have shaken the forty-eighth annual Seabright Invitation Tennis Tournament continued today with two more of the highest ranking women players being shunted to the sidelines.

The victims were Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., and Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, seeded one-two in this tourney and ranked two-three in the national list. Their conquerors were Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, and Catherine Wolf, of Elkhart, Ind., respectively.

Otherwise, today's action produced results that were anticipated, all of the favored men moving into the semifinals with ease, and Mrs. Ethel Burkhardt Arnold, of Los Angeles, and Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., completing the women's semifinal bracket.

Miss Babcock Injured.

The survivors in the men's division are the top-seeded Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake; Gregory S. Mangin, of Newark, national indoor titleholder; Berkeley Bell, veteran New York campaigner and winner of the Seabright Bowl last year, and Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C.

Parker, the Nation's fourth-ranking player, was a bit off key in his first set with Henry M. Culley, of Santa Barbara, Calif., but eventually won it by 7—5 and then put his shots in working order to take the second in six straight games.

Mrs. Van Ryn, ranked No. 13 this year, defeated little Mrs. Fabyan, 6—3, 6—2, and although the New Englander was erratic, Mrs. Van Ryn well deserved the victory.

Miss Wolf might not have beaten Miss Babcock had the latter not been handicapped by a pulled Achilles tendon in her right leg, yet she also performed creditably with her back court forcing shots and won in three sets, 6—3, 1—6, 7—5.

Stephens, All-Stars' first sacker, poled out a home run in the fourth inning to decide the contest and break a 2-2 tie. The game went only five frames, each team getting three hits.

D. C. Golf Four To Leave For U. S. Event

Rippy, Malloy, Burrows, Burton Are Honored at Reception.

CLAUDE RIPPY, George Malloy, Ted Burrows and Bobby Burton, who will leave today for Indianapolis to vie in the National Public Links golf championship, went through a vigorous 18-hole workout yesterday at Indian Spring Country Club, and last night were honored at a public reception at East Potomac.

Rippy, District municipal champion and captain of the four-man Harding Cup team, played with Malloy in a match against Al Houghton, professional, and Tom Belshe, golf chairman, and the municipal stars lost after a hard scrap, 2 and 1.

In another foursome, Burrows and Burton played with the Kruezberg brothers, Dick and Frank, of Indian Spring. Dick and Burrows teamed to defeat Burton and Frank, 3 and 2.

Houghton showed the way in scoring with a 70, 1 under par. He went out in 34 and returned in 36, birdieing the first and sixteenth and going over par only on the fourteenth.

Holes Out Chip Shot.

Malloy shot 36—37—73 and Rippy 37—37—74. Belshe had 75. A feature of the round was Malloy's holing out of a chip shot for a birdie on the eighth hole.

Dick Kruezberg scored a 76, Burrows a 78, Burton 82 and Frank 86.

Louis R. Barrett, recreational director, who batted for Commissioner George Allen, presented the Leoffler Trophy to Rippy at the East Potomac gathering. He was the principal speaker on the program. Medals were presented the four players.

Three of the Harding Cuppers, Malloy, Rippy and Burton, are leaving this morning by automobile for Indianapolis. Burrows will embark by train this evening.

Frederick Downs Martinsburg, 4-2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., July 24.—Martinsburg (W. Va.) Blue Sox were defeated by the Frederick Hustlers, former Blue Ridge semi-professional players, at McCurdy Fields, 4 to 2.

In addition to holding the West Virginians to four hits, Rice contributed two singles, one in the seventh inning sending across the winning run. Frederick scored first in the second inning when Six and Steele made successive singles and the former crossed the plate on a throw to first base. Martinsburg evened matters in the fourth on a walk to Kilmore, sacrifice and Lamp's hit to center field which got away from Six.

The Blue Sox took the lead in the next inning on a walk and two errors which counted for one run. Frederick deadlocked the score in the last half of the same frame when Rice singled and scored on Hoffman's double. Frederick won in the seventh inning when Strine walked and crossed the plate on Rice's single. The latter scored when Prather dropped Hoffman's long fly to right field.

March Net Victor, Johnsen Defeated

District Youth Captures Mid-Atlantic Crown.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, July 24.—Baltimore and Washington shared honors in the Maryland State Boys and Juniors Tennis Tournament, which was completed at Clifton Park today. Malcolm Weinstein, of Baltimore, Middle Atlantic champion, No. 1 in the boys' division, conquered David Johnson, Washington star, runner-up in the Middle Atlantic test and his former victor, 6—3, 6—2. Henry March, 1934 national No. 6 player, of Washington, was supreme in the junior section, defeating Robert Land, University of Maryland student, 6—3, 6—2, 6—3, in the best three out of five series.

March and Charles Channing, also of the District, annexed the doubles crown for juniors by triumphing over Nathan Askin and C. B. Gore, both of this city, 6—0, 7—5, 2—6, 6—4, in the only extended match of the last round.

Jamison, of Kenwood, Cards Three Late Birdies for a 67

AL JAMISON, Kenwood Golf and Country Club's modest professional, gave Old Man Par a terrific lacing yesterday over his home course. Jamison shot a 67, 3 under par, before the very eyes of Professional Wiffy Cox, who scored a 70.

Others in the touring party were Russ Hollebaugh, with 75; Frank Gatewood, with 83, and Gus Sachlis, with 85.

It was Jamison's best 18-hole round at Kenwood. He had 4 birdies and an eagle, and burned up the back nine in 32, one of the lowest 9-hole records ever scored on that side.

Jamison fired two nice wallops to the twelfth green and holed a 20-footer for an eagle. Even par going to the sixteenth, he finished like a champion, 3—2—3, laying his niblick dead to the pin for a birdie on the "punch bowl" hole, holing out a niblick shot after overshooting the short seventeenth and sinking a 6-footer for a birdie 3 on the home hole.

Jamison's card:

D. C. Fans Are Divided Over Sarron-Bernard

By Bill McCormick.

THE Pete Sarron-Roger Bernard featherweight thumping contest scheduled for Griffith Stadium next Monday night has excited more pre-fight diversity of opinion than any battle since McDowell marched on Bull Run.

Pro-Sarron advocates are contending that Pete will outspeed, outthink and otherwise outmaneuver the Flint, Michigan, feather. They point out that the Syrian Sizzler never has encountered any trouble spanking opponents who are the least bit slow afoot or amind—and that Bernard is both these.

Those whose tongues are wagging in favor of Bernard point out that Sarron's one big weakness lies in his inability to withstand a series of resounding thwacks in the stomach and that Roger specializes in resounding thwacks to the brisket. Not that Sarron ever has been the recipient of a prolonged series of thwacks in the stomach—he won't, or hasn't yet, stood still long enough to receive such treatment—but the pro-Bernard advocates are arguing that he will be unable to resist Roger's two-fisted barrages to the midriff.

In support of the ten-round main event between Sarron and Bernard, Andy Martin has been signed to do eight rounds of semifinalling against Patsy Severo.

Because of lack of a quorum, the Boxing Commission did not meet yesterday to discuss the Bobby Goldstein-George Levey bout, which was declared "no contest" at Griffith Stadium last Monday night.

Both judges at the bout ordered the preliminary match, which was scheduled for four rounds, stopped in the second round because they felt Levey was either not good enough to battle Goldstein or was not trying.

It is expected that the commission will consider the matter at the next regular meeting next Monday.

The Ken Overlin-Babe Risko middleweight contest for the police benefit card September 30 may be off the program.

Maj. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the Boxing Commission, who is arranging the card, had given Risko until yesterday to decide whether or not he would accept the match. Risko has been promised a shot at the middleweight title now held by Teddy Yarosz and is attempting to persuade promoters of the championship bout to permit him to meet Overlin in the interim.

Yesterday Risko asked for another extension of time before giving a definite acceptance of the Overlin bout and Miller is seeking a substitute card.

The new Rolling Rock Hunt race committee, of which Mr. Skinner is a member, has made numerous improvements to the course.

Jacobs Holds Key to Ring Situation

Schmeling's Manager to Arrive Today; Will Meet Johnston.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Joe (Hell Hitler) Jacobs is coming home on the Washington tomorrow with the answer to the question, "What's Max Schmeling going to do?"

Madison Square Garden and the rival Twentieth Century Sporting Club have been staging a hot fight to enlist the temperamental German under their respective banners for another big heavyweight spectacle here in the fall.

The Twentieth Century thinks a battle between Schmeling and Joe Louis, sloe-eyed Detroit Negro sensation, will be good for a $750,000 house, nearest approach to a million-dollar gate since the boom days of Tex Rickard.

The Garden wants to pit the German against Max Baer and is using a possible shot at James J. Braddock's new title as bait both for Schmeling and Baer.

Match Uncertain.

So sure is James J. Johnston, Garden matchmaker, that Schmeling has decided to take the Baer match that he is going all the way down the bay to meet the Washington, ostensibly to personally welcome his old pal, Joe, but confidentially to put handcuffs on him if he makes the slightest move toward signing with anyone else.

Mike Jacobs, of the Twentieth Century, was hurrying from Chicago to New York tonight by plane. There is no reason to believe he also will be aboard the cutter greeting the Washington, but his plane will get him here in plenty of time, if he wants to make the trip.

The last word from Schmeling and Joe Jacobs was that the latter has been clothed with full authority to choose between the two proposals and make the final decision.

May Want Title Shot.

Meanwhile, there is smart money along Forty-ninth street which says the little man with the big cigar is coming home empty-handed; that Schmeling isn't coming here to fight either Baer or Louis and will consider a trip to America for nothing less than a fight with Braddock.

If he is told he must first hurdle Baer or the Negro, the dope is he will quit the ring, retire to his estates in Prussia and live on his money.

To further complicate things, Joe Gould, manager of Braddock, said today he regards Louis as the outstanding challenger at present and that the man getting the first shot at the title should first be made to get by the colored boy.

All this notwithstanding that Braddock is under contract to the Garden while Louis' services are pledged to the Twentieth Century Club.

Entrants Gunning For Cruickshank

Golfers Map Plans to End Reign in State Open.

By the Associated Press.

Newport News, Va., July 24.—Rebellion reared its ugly head today in the ranks of Virginia golf as pros and amateurs conspired to end the reign of the old master, Bobby Cruickshank.

Since Bobby came to Virginia open championships have been Cruickshank exhibitions, with the rest of the field floundering about in the wake kicked up by the wee, canny Scot.

It will be Cruickshank against the field again in the 72-hole State open August 10 and 11, but Bobby will have to kick over no less than three amateur champions whose overlapping titles cover all of Dixie from the Gulf to Maryland and a flock of first rate professionals in his bid for a third straight title.

Virginians Ship 23 Yearlings To Sales

Special Dispatch to The Post.

LEESBURG, Va., July 24.—A consignment of 23 thoroughbred yearlings will be sent to the Saratoga sales next month by Loudoun County breeders. The sales will begin on August 7.

The largest number of Loudoun thoroughbred yearlings will go from the Rockbridge Farm stables of D. N. Rust, jr., near Leesburg. Mr. Rust, who is a vice president and honorary whip of the Loudoun Hunt and a vice president and director of the Virginia Breeders Association, will ship 15 on August 13. The outstanding colt in this lot is by Timemaker out of Karelia, a daughter of Economic, which ran second in the Kentucky Derby two years ago. Five other Timemaker colts are out of Supernet, Red Hat, Rock Pile, Queen of the Blues, a French mare, and Lotus Blossom. Five fillies by Timemaker going to the sale are out of Helen L., Raquetta, Urbanna, Pinta and Countersign.

Mr. Rust also will offer two colts by Woodcraft out of Little Ruth and Breadwinner, and a filly out of Florence L., A colt by St. Henry, out of Sand Coin, is also in the consignment.

Former Gov. Westmoreland Davis will send six to the sales from his Morven Park stables. These will include a chestnut filly by Poppy, out of Balmasque; a chestnut filly by Lucullite, out of Chant; a dark brown filly by Lucullite, out of Humbug; a light chestnut filly by Reigh Count, out of Kum Kalessi; a brown colt by Lucullite, out of Ragina, and a bay colt by Lucullite, out of Tokyo Belle, a daughter of Man o' War.

W. H. Lipscomb, newly elected president of the Virginia Breeders Association, and joint M. F. H. of the Loudoun Hunt, will ship on August 8 two chestnut colts by Teddy, out of Duration and Ready.

Charlottesville Is Beaten by Culpeper

Bows to Three-Run Rally in Ninth, Champions Winning, 10-9.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., July 24.—The Culpeper champions scored three runs in the ninth inning to nose out Charlottesville here today, 10 to 9, in a free-hitting contest.

Beale, who started on the mound for Culpeper, was ineffective, being touched for 11 hits. Waugh, his successor, did not last a full inning, and McIntyre was called upon to finish the game.

Charlottesville staged a batting rally in the eighth, which netted six runs. Sargent, Moore and Fary starred at bat for the locals, while Edelin contributed a three-base hit. Sargent fielded sharply throughout, pulling down three long drives near the scoreboard in deep left field.

Edelin, former George Washington twirler, went the route for the locals. The visitors collected a total of 17 hits. Campbell and Metheny led the attack, the former collecting four hits, including a triple and double, and the latter a home run and two doubles.

South and West Displacing East In Industry

Auto Trade, Climate and Labor Are Factors in Drift.

New York, July 24.—The gradually declining relative industrial importance of the northeastern portion of the United States since the war is discussed by the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, in a current survey of this trend, which reads in part:

"There has been a shift of manufacturing industry toward the Midwest and toward the South and the commercial development of the Pacific Coast has reduced the demand in that area for products of Eastern manufacture. These trends are apparent in the figures on value of manufacturing wages paid, and number of factory employes in various sections of the country.

"The westward drift of industry is largely the result of the growing importance of the automobile trade centered in Michigan, while the drain to the South has been caused by the labor advantages offered in those States.

"The following table compares the per cent of total value of manufactures for 1921 and 1933 (last available year) in the various broad geographical divisions of the United States:

	Per cent of total
	1921	1933
New England	11.3	9.8
Middle Atlantic	33.5	29.7
East North Central	27.0	28.2
West North Central	8.0	7.6
South Atlantic	6.8	9.6
East South Central	2.5	3.2
West South Central	4.0	4.0
Mountain	1.4	1.3
Pacific	5.5	6.4

"Three factors have been primarily responsible for the industrial expansion of the Pacific Coast States, natural resources, climate and the extension of ample transportation and communication facilities. An abundant agriculture, forestry reserve, petroleum and fisheries have attracted industries and necessary workers, with the result that the Pacific Coast is rapidly gaining as a producing and consuming market.

"The Federal census of manufactures does not offer a full measure of the industrial growth of the Pacific Coast States because it does not include such operations as lumbering, petroleum extraction, commercial fishing and other nonmanufacturing activities. Nevertheless, all of these account for large numbers of wage earners."

Spreading Rust Rockets Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 24.—Alarming reports about the rapid spread of black rust, especially in Canada, brought about new soaring of wheat values today. Adding to upward impetus of the wheat market were forecasts of high temperatures Northwest, a condition that numerous traders construed as likely to enlarge crop damage both from rust and drought.

Wheat closed firm at virtually the day's top level, 1¼ to 2¼ cents above yesterday's finish, September, 86 to 86⅛; corn, ¼ to ¾ cents up, September, 76¼ to 76⅝; oats, ⅛ off to ½ up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 47 cents.

Cotton—Responding to the firm spot situation, prices advanced more than $1 per bale. Net gains at the close were 11 to 17 points with July 11.86.

Netherlands Jumps Rate to 5% From 3

Amsterdam, July 24 (AP).—The Bank of the Netherlands raised its discount rate today to 5 per cent from 3 per cent, following three lowerings of the discount rate during the previous month. Despite the imminence of a cabinet crisis, the government announced that it would continue to defend the guilder and the gold standard.

June Auto Sales Increase in Year

New York, July 24 (AP).—June factory sales of automobiles in the United States amounted to 361,320 vehicles, of which 296,609 were passenger cars and 64,711 were trucks, according to figures prepared by trade sources for submission to the Department of Commerce.

This compares with 364,727 vehicles in May and 306,477 in June, last year.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Advance in Less Active Trading With Desultory Profit Taking—Italian Bonds Break—Dutch Money Rallies—Wheat Climbs.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 24.—Higher prices were paid in most financial and commodity markets, but trading in stocks was less active than yesterday and while the advances were more general they were modest. Several leading stocks mounted to new high prices for the year, but profit taking kept others in bounds. Bonds were firm, except for severe declines in Italian obligations, and foreign currencies were steadier. Cotton improved and wheat hardened. September wheat options closed 2 cents higher at 86⅛ cents a bushel.

Stocks had their lights and shadows. Farm implement and mail order shares were unusually strong, buoyed by the rise in farm commodity markets, which apparently was the response to the Senate's passage of a bigger and broader AAA measure. Deere and Case scored gains of more than 2 points each. Harvester, Minneapolis-Moline, and Oliver were moderately higher, the latter being especially active. Montgomery Ward climbed to a new peak.

Steels held around their best prices of the year. Otis continued its activity. Rails were fractionally higher, but did not repeat their little spurt of the closing hour yesterday. Better prices were the rule among the tobaccos, metals, motors and amusements, speculation in motion-picture stocks growing a little toward the close. General Motors also moved up to a new high in the late trading, and interest was renewed in Chrysler. The market expects a good earnings report to be published by General Motors tomorrow afternoon, but the dividend meeting will not be held until next month.

Price irregularity continued in the chemicals, oils, rubbers, foods, and public utilities. Cluett-Peabody dropped abruptly on a poor earnings statement. Losing 7 points or so, the stock touched the worst price in two years. Lehn & Fink, a recent weak stock, rallied a little and then fell to the lowest price of the year. Some preferred issues did well. Pittsburgh Steel preferred advanced more than 9 points to bring its ten-day rise to about 20 points. American Power preferred issues rose 2 points to new high levels. Youngstown Sheet, Wheeling & Lake Erie, Hat, and Columbia Gas were other preferreds to bob up on moderate orders.

Earnings Slightly Better.

Wall street's feeling toward the stock market remained on the bullish side, and many who recently have urged caution changed their views and suggested that no important setback need be expected for a while. The market's strength itself has been the greatest molder of sentiment, and the steady, if small, flow of investment orders from various parts of the country, with rising volume of speculation, have carried the day.

Earnings and prospects are the ultimate determination of security values. Actually the corporation earning statements for the second three months and the first half of the year are running in the aggregate only 2 per cent or so above those for the corresponding periods of last year. Some extraordinarily cheerful reports are offset by others showing sharp declines in profits. It is the location of the improvement rather than the total recovery that is giving the market its basis for hope.

Long depressed sections of business are at long last turning the corner. Heavy buying of automobiles in a season when dealers usually find time hanging on their hands is proving to be the commercial surprise of the year. The automotive industry is giving a considerable fillip to the steel trade, and the midweek reviews also note a rise in railroad and farm implement orders. Machine tools, the electrical trades, and building construction activity is on the rise. That is, the durable goods industries are coming forward. Their prosperity will do more to cut into unemployment than anything else.

To complete the setting for prosperity one thing more is needed: A re-opening of the capital market in the real sense, and not merely a stirring of refunding to take advantage of low interest rates. Business men already have begun to spend some of their money, and when their faith in profits and the dollar turns strong enough to induce them to borrow (provided meanwhile the banking laws have been amended to make ample capital available), the pace of recovery will quicken.

Deflation Pains.

Anxiety over Dutch currency and the bearishness in all financial markets over the Italian situation in the light of the military project in Abyssinia and the country's falling trade gave the foreign exchanges another exciting day. In the forenoon the guilder was demoralized, frightened by the lifting of The Netherlands Bank's discount rate. Some unofficial transactions were reported below 67 cents, or about half a cent down, equal to yesterday's decline; but in the afternoon strong support canceled most of the fall.

Other gold currencies suffered with the guilder, but rallied with it. Italian money improved with the remainder of the market, but Italian bonds had the worst break they ever have experienced. Government issues set new low prices and the Italian city bonds dropped 5 points or so. The market was recognized as a special one and other foreign bonds were not particularly hurt. Italy probably can hold up the lira for a while, now that the strain of maintaining a gold coverage is over; but few believe the country's credit can stand the expense of an important war. Inflation, i. e., debt and currency repudiation appears to be the solution.

Steel Activity Rises To 43½% Capacity

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 24.—Iron Age reported today another rise of 3 points in the operating rate of the steel industry, making the current average 43½ per cent of capacity. With this and previous consecutive gains since Independence Day week, ingot production has recovered all of the ground lost since the middle of May and further gains are promised, the summary declared.

New York Bank Buys Mortgage At 3½ Per Cent

Lowest Rate in History Paid for $800,000 First Trust.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Mortgage money at 3½ per cent as an outlet for the crowded coffers of banks and trust companies was inaugurated in New York this week when a commercial bank placed a first mortgage of $800,000 on a Manhattan property. The term was reported to be three years.

Some consternation was expressed in local financial circles when news of the deal spread. Heretofore the absolute low-water mark of all mortgages had been regarded as 4 per cent, with only the choicest property even remotely eligible.

According to S. Wilson Camp, secretary of the District Building and Loan Association, the majority of local first mortgages are paying from 6 to 7 per cent. Some mortgages are being taken at a base rate of 5 per cent, but little money was said to be available at those prices.

Need Outlet.

Many financiers saw in the move the result of long endeavors by commercial and other banks to find a safe outlet for uninvested funds. With call money and short-term securities yielding between 1 and 3 per cent and with long-term tax-exempt bonds throwing off less than 3 per cent, these institutions have turned to real estate for better though less liquid investment.

Some banks have been reported in the market at 4 per cent lately, but opinions expressed in the financial district yesterday were unanimous that little of the 3½ per cent financing would be done.

One bank officer, very surprised at the announcement, asserted he did not believe that conditions now justified such a move. "Although a bank might release certain funds at that rate, the supply is very limited," he said, "no long term loans, regardless of the type of security, can be invested profitably, even at 4 per cent."

Other quarters declared that the possibility of some great change in the economic system of the country during the next year were possible. They believed it extremely unwise to tie up funds for a period of years at rates that would perhaps mean a loss.

R. B. Dickey Is A. I. B. Dean.

Raymond B. Dickey, Washington attorney, was reelected dean of the American Institute of Banking at the meeting of the institute's educational committee it was announced yesterday. In addition to his duties as active head of the banking school, Dickey will teach Law II.

Plans for the coming session of the institute were made at the meeting and include a new advanced course in "Trust Functions," that will be taught by Theodore Cogswell, register of wills for the District. Remington Rand, Inc., for the three months ended on June 30 almost tripled the net income of the corresponding quarter of last year, according to the preliminary statement issued yesterday by James H. Rand, jr., president and chairman. Net income for the June quarter totaled $478,704 after charges. This was equal, after allowing for quarterly dividend requirements on the preferred stock, to 13 cents a share on 1,290,987 shares of common stock outstanding. This compares with a net income of $165,026 or $1.05 a share earned on 156,840 shares of first preferred stock in the corresponding period of 1934.

The Commonwealth & Southern Corporation and subsidiaries report a consolidated net income of $8,019,-135, after all deductions, for the year ended on June 30, equal to $5.35 a share earned on 1,499,465 shares of no-par $6 dividend preferred stock. Crisis Menaces Gold Cabinet In Netherlands

Guilders Drop Sharply but Stage Rally in Later Trading.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 24.—Wall street swung its attetion to the monetary front today where a new gold bloc crisis, centering in the Netherlands, appeared in the making.

With Amsterdam dispatches frankly envisaging the likelihood of the fall of the "hard money" cabinet of Premier Hendryk Colijn at The Hague because of lack of support for his deflationary budget measures, the guilder continued actively weak in the foreign exchange market.

The action of the Bank of the Netherlands in raising its discount rate to 5 per cent from 3 per cent after three successive cuts in the past month was regarded in banking quarters as indicating the strength of the presure under which the guilder is laboring.

There was a general tendency among foreign exchange men to discount the renewed assurances by the Colijn government that the gold standard would be maintained, since both news and confidential advices from abroad indicated grave doubt that the present government could survive the withdrawal of support by the Catholic Party.

Guilders dropped .20 of a cent in the foreign exchange market to 67.25 cents, well below the point at which gold can be shipped from Amsterdam to New York. A later rally, however, erased much of the loss.

The weakness in the guilder, including a further decline in the currency for 20 days' forward delivery to 2 cents under spot, tended to obscure the rally in the Italian lira, which rose .10 of a cent to 8.12 cents.

Giants, Yanks To Win, Says Gallico

not really me, it's my Ethiopian control. I go into my transom and my Ethiopian control walks right up out of the wall and says, "Massa Gallico, don' you worry none about them thar Giants. Them thar Cardinals ain't nuffin' but a flash in the bucket and will not last any longer than you can shake a stick at. As for them Tigers, they ain't got it. They just ain't got it. Jes talk rough to 'em. Thas all, talk up rough to 'em."

On that last, I believe that my Ethiopian control, who has always proved himself very reliable on prophecies, prediction and selections of all kinds (he was not the control who touted me on the Braddock-Baer fight, that was a little girl control named Annie Panny), intended for me, upon coming out of my transom, to reflect upon the behavior of the Tigers in the last World Series when they were exposed to the vulgarity, bad manners and general uncouth behavior of the toughest ball club of modern times, the Cards.

Personally, I thought the Cards just bullied the Tigers out of that world's championship. All the Cards acted like the tough little kids that used to come over from Third avenue and scare the hell out of me when I was a kid, and I thought that the Tigers scared just about the way I did. Not too openly, but down inside. Enough to kick the baseball around. I dunno, maybe the Tigers have learned to chaw plug tobacco and spit through their teeth this year, but I doubt it.

The Tigers are playing in our town now and as host I do not wish to write anything to hurt their feelings and maybe I shouldn't be reminding them of that World Series of last year at this date, but, somehow, when it was over, I had the feeling that all the Detroit players must have waked up the next morning with the feeling that somewhere along the line they had failed to say to the members of the Cardinal Club all the things they had intended.

In that series they struck me like a man who gets in an argument and his entire repartee is limited to "yeah? Oh yeah? Is that so. That's what YOU think. Oh, yeah?" and then as soon as his opponent is gone thinks up the squelch brilliantly. Maybe if the Yanks would talk up rough it would help in the current series.

The only thing that my Ethiopian control does not seem to have taken into consideration is that the Yankees, unlike the Cardinals, are not naturally a hard-boiled club. You get three guys like Delancey, Ducky Medwick and Pepper Martin together, and you have a composite picture of a sneer. The Yankees are more the college kid type, good fighters and game as they make 'em, but I don't think they are extraordinary tough. As a matter of fact, Joe McCarthy had to give them a pep talk in the dressing room before the double-header and ask them to forget their company manners for the current series and go out there and try to out-rude the Detroiters.

Synthetic toughness never really works very well, because if you are ever caught at it you feel ashamed and blush, and nobody ever caught anybody on the Cardinals' blushing, but I guess what my Ethiopian control, whose name is Mgumbo, means is that the Tigers are that kind of a ball club, and can be annoyed out of a ball game by the right kind of people.

The Giants have a better ball club than the Cardinals this year and will win, so keep your shirt on. The Tigers won't win the American League pennant, and maybe the Yankees won't either. What do you think of that? Who will? Hey, Buddy, what do you want for three cents? That will hold for another day.

But in the meantime, I'm just passing on what the spirits told me, and the spirits are never wrong—much. I don't know how Annie Panny got so far off the track on Baer-Braddock. She is a very young control, and comes from some little town in Arkansas. I don't think she knows much about prizefighting. I have the utmost confidence, though, in Mgumbo and have never had a wrong steer from him. He says keep cool and don't worry. Everything is going to be just swell. I think that's lovely.

Allison Conquers Henkel in Cup Play

the base-line at the start of the second, and went on the defensive.

With the pressure off, the young German settled down and began playing his game. After dropping the opening game, the German waded through the next four with a loss of 6 points.

Allison rallied to take the sixth, but dropped the seventh on Henkel's service to trail, 2—5. With the set almost lost the American turned on the heat. Deserting the baseline, he stormed over the court to blind the German with a brilliant attack and sweep the next five games for set.

Allison Weakens.

His vivid surge in the second set cost Allison dearly in strength, and he was a picture of weariness as he started the third. He took the first game, but Henkel whipped across two sweet passing shots to win the second, then took the third. Allison played lazily to lose the fourth, but came to life to win the fifth and sixth. Henkel served a love game in the seventh and seemed well on his way to the set when Allison weakly outed two easy shots in the eighth to trail, 3—5.

The Texan still had something left, however, for he moved to the attack in the ninth and took it with a glorious cross-court backhand volley. He gained again in the tenth, to level at 5 all. He went into the lead, 7—6, in the thirteenth, but dropped the fourteenth when he purposely double-faulted after the crowd had booed a line decision on the previous exchange.

Henkel took the fifteenth as Allison dragged himself about the court. Allison leveled at 8-all, but squandered a 40-0 lead in the seventeenth to trail once again. But this was the last time he was to be behind. He served an unbeatable eighteenth game and then broke through Henkel in the nineteenth with two beautiful lobs and a driving kill from midcourt.

Whipped now, Henkel outed four straight points to lose the last game.

Obviously tired from his gruueling five-set doubles match yesterday, Von Cramm was not at his best against Budge. With nothing at stake the German did not reach the heights he did in defeating Allison in three straight sets Monday or in his gallant, losing stand in the doubles.

Nats Trimmed By Cleveland, 10-6, 13-8

Indians Pound Relief Men Unmercifully to Win Two Wild Games.

milk, the league's leading hitter, sprained his right ankle and was forced to leave the game.

The Nats had rallied gamely in the first game to tie the game at 6—6 with three runs in the eighth, but Jack Russell and Leon Pettit pitched the ball game away in the ninth when the Indians countered with four runs.

But Russell and Pettit were heroes compared to the Nats' relief pitchers in the second game. At the end of the fifth inning the Nats had a 7-0 lead. And then Hadley faltered. Bucky Harris got him out of there after the Indians had cut the lead to 7-4, but the last four innings netted Cleveland all of its 13 runs.

Harris sent Young Eldon McLean into the game in the eighth and he could get only one man out. By the time Ed Linke could retire the side, Cleveland had four runs for the inning and an 8-8 tie.

A triple by Odell Hale, another by Pitcher Ralph Winegarner and Galatzer's single with the bases full were the pivotal blows in the uprising that tied the score.

Bucky Harris sent Buck Newsom into the game in the ninth in an effort to check the Indian onslaught, but Newsom was fortunate to escape with his life. Bruce Campbell bashed a long triple against the left center wall to put the winning run on base and then Newsom began throwing a succession of base hits.

Myer Is Banished.

The first game began to go mildly riotous in the sixth inning when Capt. Buddy Myer, with unbelieving ears, heard Umpire Charles Donnelly call a slightly wide pitch the third strike. Myer turned upon Donnelly, and with his jaw jutting to within an inch of the umpire's nose, he unloosed a torrent of abuse on Donnelly with specific references to the umpire's eyesight, his antecedents and general, all-round unworthiness.

For that, Myer got the thumb. "Yer out!" shouted Donnelly, and it went double. Myer was not only out, but out of the ball game. And that meant out for the day, too, because players banished from the first game of a double-header are not permitted to return for the second.

But in the eighth inning, the game went wild for keeps. Donnelly again was the center of the storm and Catcher Sammy Holbrook staged a five-minute exhibition of umbrage that should have netted him a suspension for the rest of the season, if Myer's protests netted him the day off.

Called Foul Ball.

Unlike Myer, Holbrook had reason and justice on his side. When Odell Hale missed a third strike by, conservatively, half a foot, Holbrook dropped the pitch, hastily picked it up, and tagged Hale out. And then he heard the hapless Donnelly call it a foul ball.

Holbrook was beside himself with anger. Barely able to restrain himself from laying heavy hands on the umpire, Holbrook charged Donnelly, nudged him about, and bellowed for fully five minutes with his face against the umpire's. Manager Bucky Harris and the rest of the Nats rushed from the dugout, Harris pulling Donnelly by his breast protector straps and remonstrating vigorously.

Only when Harris ordered him to cease did Holbrook turn from Donnelly and stop his shouting. Without benefit of the amplifying system, Holbrook's frenzied spouting could be plainly heard from every seat in the park.

And then, as luck would have it the not unexpected happened. With order finally restored and Hale still at the plate, he knocked Leon Pettit's next pitch deep into the left-field corner for a home run with a man on base, to bring the Indians their last two runs of the ball game.

Tie Score in Eighth.

The Nats twice gave Earl Whitehill one-run leads against Lloyd Brown in the early innings and twice the Indians tied the score, but Whitehill ran into a flock of extra base hits in the sixth inning and the Indians stepped away to a 5-2 advantage.

It was 6 to 3 at the end of the seventh, but the Nats took advantage of two errors by Bozie Berger to tie the score in the eighth, during which Lloyd Brown departed the scene. Berger bobbled Miles' grounder and Travis followed with a single. Powell's fly drove in one run and another scored when Manush beat out a hit to Trosky. In came Mel Harder, Johnson's ace, to pitch a single to Bluege, and when Berger fumbled Pinch Hitter Stone's mild grounder, Manush scored from third with the tying run.

On The Air Today

The wind seems to be blowing in Lanny Ross's direction these days. I missed his program last Sunday night, but I have been told that as a show it fell pretty flat. Ross himself was in his usual good voice and his musical contributions were excellent.

The criticism was directed at the script, or lines, the performers used as a device to get across the State Fair background. Hence, it would appear that whatever of credit is to go to his new program really is to be given to Lanny and his singing.

This becomes significant when I consider that since last Sunday night a number of listeners have voted for Ross as first in their affections on the radio, in The Post Sunday radio page program preference poll. And several named the Lanny Ross State Fair Concert as their favorite, despite having heard it only once and despite the shortcomings in the production as a whole.

Perhaps this evidence of favor for Ross is not sufficient for such a broad statement, but it would seem that Lanny is to be reckoned at the top of the heap as a radio name this coming winter.

Bill McCormick injected a new note in "Curbstone Queries" yesterday which brought forth immediate expressions of approval from listeners. McCormick asked no one a particular question, but propounded whatever question happened to enter his mind as he faced a new interviewee. He learned, for example, that men could go without coats in theaters without incurring the wrath of some women, at least, and that the average man in the noon day crowds does not think well of any proposal to move the Capitol of these United States to the Central West for any reason whatever. Graydon Walker will use the same type of questioning today in "Curbstone Queries," which is heard daily, WAML, at 12 noon.

The special features department of the local C. B. S. offices decided this week that something new and novel was needed to lend that different touch to what might otherwise be a week of summer broadcasting dull as the drone of the bee. So Arch McDonald has been assigned to report for WJSV listeners the championship donkey ball game between the lawyers of Alexandria and the winner of an earlier game between the Kiwanis Club and the police department. All the players except the batter, catcher and pitcher are mounted on donkeys. I am anticipating the wit who probably will say, "Who Rode McDonald?"

Giants Stop Cards To Increase Lead

Bill Terry for the final out of the inning.

Trailing 1-0 going into the seventh after getting only two hits up to that time, the Giants put the bias on Dean and Pepper Martin to do all their scoring in a lump. Mel Ott opened with a single and went to third on Hank Leiber's double to deep right. Then Martin, whose daring base running had produced the first Cardinal run, made a titanic wild throw over first base after stopping Travis Jackson's grounder cleanly and holding the runners on their bases. Both runners scored and Jackson raced all the way to third.

A ladies' day crowd of 12,000 cash customers and 17,000 women who were admitted free saw the game.

not really me, it's my Ethiopian control. I go into my transom and my Ethiopian control walks right up out of the wall and says, "Massa Gallico, don' you worry none about them thar Giants. Them thar Cardinals ain't nuffin' but a flash in the bucket and will not last any longer than you can shake a stick at. As for them Tigers, they ain't got it. They just ain't got it. Jes' talk rough to 'em. Thas all, talk up rough to 'em."

On that last, I believe that my Ethiopian control, who has always proved himself very reliable on prophecies, prediction and selections of all kinds (he was not the control who touted me on the Braddock-Baer fight, that was a little girl control named Annie Panny), intended for me, upon coming out of my transom, to reflect upon the behavior of the Tigers in the last World Series when they were exposed to the vulgarity, bad manners and general uncouth behavior of the toughest ball club of modern times, the Cards.

Personally, I thought the Cards just bullied the Tigers out of that world's championship. All the Cards acted like the tough little kids that used to come over from Third avenue and scare the hell out of me when I was a kid, and I thought that the Tigers scared just about the way I did. Not too openly, but down inside. Enough to kick the baseball around. I dunno, maybe the Tigers have learned to chaw plug tobacco and spit through their teeth this year, but I doubt it.

The Tigers are playing in our town now and as host I do not wish to write anything to hurt their feelings and maybe I shouldn't be reminding them of that World Series of last year at this date, but, somehow, when it was over, I had the feeling that all the Detroit players must have waked up the next morning with the feeling that somewhere along the line they had failed to say to the members of the Cardinal Club all the things they had intended.

In that series they struck me like a man who gets in an argument and his entire repartee is limited to "yeah? Oh yeah? Is that so. That's what YOU think. Oh, yeah?" and then as soon as his opponent is gone thinks up the squelch brilliantly. Maybe if the Yanks would talk up rough it would help in the current series.

The only thing that my Ethiopian control does not seem to have taken into consideration is that the Yankees, unlike the Cardinals, are not naturally a hard-boiled club. You get three guys like Delancey, Ducky Medwick and Pepper Martin together, and you have a composite picture of a sneer. The Yankees are more the college kid type, good fighters and game as they make 'em, but I don't think they are extraordinary tough. As a matter of fact, Joe McCarthy had to give them a pep talk in the dressing room before the double-header and ask them to forget their company manners for the current series and go out there and try to out-rude the Detroiters.

Synthetic toughness never really works very well, because if you are ever caught at it you feel ashamed and blush, and nobody ever caught anybody on the Cardinals' blushing, but I guess what my Ethiopian control, whose name is Mgumbo, means is that the Tigers are that kind of a ball club, and can be annoyed out of a ball game by the right kind of people.

The Giants have a better ball club than the Cardinals this year and will win, so keep your shirt on. The Tigers won't win the American League pennant, and maybe the Yankees won't either. What do you think of that? Who will? Hey, Buddy, what do you want for three cents? That will hold for another day.

But in the meantime I'm just passing on what the spirits told me, and the spirits are never wrong much. I don't know how Annie Panny got so far off the track on Baer-Braddock. She is a very young control, and comes from some little town in Arkansas. I don't think she knows much about prizefighting. I have the utmost confidence, though, in Mgumbo and have never had a wrong steer from him. He says keep cool and don't worry. Everything is going to be just swell. I think that's lovely.

the base-line at the start of the second, and went on the defensive.

With the pressure off, the young German settled down and began playing his game. After dropping the opening game, the German waded through the next four with a loss of 6 points.

Allison rallied to take the sixth, but dropped the seventh on Henkel's service to trail, 2—5. With the set almost lost the American turned on the heat. Deserting the base-line, he stormed over the court to blind the German with a brilliant attack and sweep the next five games for set.

Allison Weakens.

His vivid surge in the second set cost Allison dearly in strength, and he was a picture of weariness as he started the third. He took the first game, but Henkel whipped across two sweet passing shots to win the second, then took the third. Allison played lazily to lose the fourth, but came to life to win the fifth and sixth. Henkel served a love game in the seventh and seemed well on his way to the set when Allison weakly outed two easy shots in the eighth to trail, 3—5.

The Texan still had something left, however, for he moved to the attack in the ninth and took it with a glorious cross-court backhand volley. He fanned again in the tenth to level at 5 all. He went into the lead, 7—6, in the thirteenth, milk, the league's leading hitter, sprained his right ankle and was forced to leave the game.

The Nats had rallied gamely in the first game to tie the game at 6—6 with three runs in the eighth, but Jack Russell and Leon Pettit pitched the ball game away in the ninth when the Indians countered with four runs.

But Russell and Pettit were heroes compared to the Nats' relief pitchers in the second game. At the end of the fifth inning the Nats had a 7-0 lead. And then Hadley faltered. Bucky Harris got him out of there after the Indians had cut the lead to 7-4, but the last four innings netted Cleveland all of its 13 runs.

Harris sent Young Eldon McLean into the game in the eighth and he could get only one man out. By the time Ed Linke could retire the side, Cleveland had four runs for the inning and an 8-8 tie.

A triple by Odell Hale, another by Pitcher Ralph Winegarner and Galatzer's single with the bases full were the pivotal blows in the uprising that tied the score.

Bucky Harris sent Buck Newsom into the game in the ninth in an effort to check the Indian onslaught, but Newsom was fortunate to escape with his life. Bruce Campbell bashed a long triple against the left center wall to put the winning run on base and then Newsom began throwing a succession of base hits.

Myer Is Banished.

The first game began to go mildly riotous in the sixth inning when Capt. Buddy Myer, with unbelieving ears, heard Umpire Charles Donnelly call a slightly wide pitch the third strike. Myer turned upon Donnelly, and with his jaw jutting to within an inch of the umpire's nose, he unloosed a torrent of abuse on Donnelly with specific references to the umpire's eyesight, his antecedents and general, all-round unworthiness.

For that, Myer got the thumb. "Yer out!" shouted Donnelly, and it went double. Myer was not only out, but out of the ball game. And that meant out for the day, too, because players banished from the first game of a double-header are not permitted to return for the second.

But in the eighth inning, the game went wild for keeps. Donnelly again was the center of the storm and Catcher Sammy Holbrook staged a five-minute exhibition of umbrage that should have netted him a suspension for the rest of the season, if Myer's protests netted him the day off.

Called Foul Ball.

Unlike Myer, Holbrook had reason and justice on his side. When Odell Hale missed a third strike by, conservatively, half a foot, Holbrook dropped the pitch, hastily picked it up, and tagged Hale out. And then he heard the hapless Donnelly call it a foul ball.

Holbrook was beside himself with anger. Barely able to restrain himself from laying heavy hands on the umpire, Holbrook charged Donnelly, nudged him about, and bellowed for fully five minutes with his face against the umpire's. Manager Bucky Harris and the rest of the Nats rushed from the dugout, Harris pulling Donnelly by his breast protector straps and remonstrating vigorously.

Only when Harris ordered him to cease did Holbrook turn from Donnelly and stop his shouting. Without benefit of the amplifying system, Holbrook's frenzied spouting could be plainly heard from every seat in the park.

And then, as luck would have it the not unexpected happened. With order finally restored and Hale still at the plate, he knocked Leon Pettit's next pitch deep into the left-field corner for a home run with a man on base, to bring the Indians their last two runs of the ball game.

Tie Score in Eighth.

The Nats twice gave Earl Whitehill one-run leads against Lloyd Brown in the early innings and twice the Indians tied the score, but Whitehill ran into a flock of extra base hits in the sixth inning and the Indians stepped away to a 5-2 advantage.

It was 6 to 3 at the end of the seventh, but the Nats took advantage of two errors by Bozie Berger to tie the score in the eighth, during which Lloyd Brown departed the scene. Berger bobbled Miles' grounder and Travis followed with a single. Powell's fly drove in one run and another scored when Manush beat out a hit to Trosky. In came Mel Harder, Johnson's ace, to pitch a single to Bluege, and when Berger fumbled Pinch Hitter Stone's mild grounder, Manush scored from third with the tying run.

But their valiant rally only delayed defeat for the Nats. Russell opened the ninth by pitching a double to Vosmik, whose line drive hit the wall in left center, and Averill drove him home with a single to right. Trosky's double to left scored Averill and then it was that Hale banged his home run over Manush's head to seal the Nats' unhappy fate.

but dropped the fourteenth when he purposely double-faulted after the crowd had booed a line decision on the previous exchange.

Henkel took the fifteenth as Allison dragged himself about the court.

Allison leveled at 8-all, but squandered a 40-0 lead in the seventeenth to trail once again. But this was the last time he was to be behind. He served an unbeatable eighteenth game and then broke through Henkel in the nineteenth with two beautiful lobs and a driving kill from midcourt.

Whipped now, Henkel outed four straight points to lose the last game.

Obviously tired from his gruueling five-set doubles match yesterday, Von Cramm was not at his best against Budge. With nothing at stake the German did not reach the heights he did in defeating Allison in three straight sets Monday or in his gallant, losing stand in the doubles.

On The Air Today

The wind seems to be blowing in Lanny Ross's direction these days. I missed his program last Sunday night, but I have been told that as a show it fell pretty flat. Ross himself was in his usual good voice and his musical contributions were excellent.

The criticism was directed at the script, or lines, the performers used as a device to get across the State Fair background. Hence, it would appear that whatever of credit is to go to his new program really is to be given to Lanny and his singing.

This becomes significant when I consider that since last Sunday night a number of listeners have voted for Ross as first in their affections on the radio, in The Post Sunday radio page program preference poll. And several named the Lanny Ross State Fair Concert as their favorite, despite having heard it only once and despite the shortcomings in the production as a whole.

Perhaps this evidence of favor for Ross is not sufficient for such a broad statement, but it would seem that Lanny is to be reckoned at the top of the heap as a radio name this coming winter.

Johann Singer, whose name should make him a barytone or crooner or something, but who really is a concert pianist of no mean ability, begins a series of recitals over the Intercity net today at 2 p. m., heard locally through WOL. He will give brief explanations of the numbers he plays as an aid to piano students and music lovers.

Elissa Landi is Rudy Vallee's guest tonight, WRC, at 7, along with the Heat Waves, Howard and Shelton, Brenan and Harmon and Tom Terriss . . . Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, discusses "The Testing of the American Ideal," WMAL, at 11 p. m. . . . Ramona introduces a new one—"I Feel a Song Coming On" in the Paul Whiteman Music Hall, WRC, at 9 . . . and Kurt Dieterle plays the ever beautiful "Vilia" as a violin solo.

The Show Boat salutes Louisville tonight with a tabloid version of "Dearest Enemy" with Lanny Ross, Conrad Thibault, Helen Oelheim, Molassas 'n' January and the rest of the troupe, WRC, at 8 . . . Symphony enthusiasts will enjoy Frank Black's concert, WMAL, at 9 when are presented Mendelssohn's "Italian Symphony" and Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet Fantasy" contrasted with Saint-Saens' "La muse et la poete." The latter is a fanciful work in which violin and cello suggest conversation of the poet and the muse.

Bill McCormick injected a new note in "Curbstone Queries" yesterday which brought forth immediate expressions of approval from listeners. McCormick asked no one a particular question, but propounded whatever question happened to enter his mind as he faced a new interviewee. He learned, for example, that men could go without coats in theaters without incurring the wrath of some women, at least, and that the average man in the noon day crowds does not think well of any proposal to move the Capitol of these United States to the Central West for any reason whatever. Graydon Walker will use the same type of questioning today in "Curbstone Queries," which is heard daily, WAMU, at 12 noon.

The special features department of the local C. B. S. offices decided this week that something new and novel was needed to lend that different touch to what might otherwise be a week of summer broadcasting dull as the drone of the bee. So Arch McDonald has been assigned to report for WJSV listeners the championship donkey ball game between the lawyers of Alexandria and the winner of an earlier game between the Kiwanis Club and the police department. All the players except the batter, catcher and pitcher are mounted on donkeys. I am anticipating the wit who probably will say, "Who Rode McDonald?"

Bill Terry for the final out of the inning.

Trailing 1-0 going into the seventh after getting only two hits up to that time, the Giants put the blas on Dean and Pepper Martin to do all their scoring in a lump. Mel Ott opened with a single and went to third on Hank Leiber's double to deep right. Then Martin, whose daring base running had produced the first Cardinal run, made a titanic wild throw over first base after stopping Travis Jackson's grounder cleanly and holding the runners on their bases. Both runners scored and Jackson raced all the way to third.

A ladies' day crowd of 12,000 cash customers and 17,000 women who were admitted free saw the game.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

Government by Wire.

Telegrams sent to Congress during the consideration of a major issue are not always sincere, Washington has discovered.

• • • •

This is a new high for belated discovery.

• • • •

Government by telegram has been one of the big developments of the past two years. The Senate and House have been large bodies of men entirely engulfed by yellow paper. The newest malady in Washington is envelope opener's cramp.

• • • •

"Wire your Senator or Representative now!" has been the cry of the year. It has got so a sensitive citizen doesn't feel like a patriot if he passes a telegraph office without dropping in and sending a message, "I am deeply outraged by House Bill 456-D or something. Are you man or mouse?"

• • • •

The logical development, if the trend is unchecked, will be Form Washington Telegrams. For instance:

No. 1.—As a taxpayer I (We) urge you to vote No (Yes) on Bill No.——. And many happy returns of the day.

• • • •

No. 2.—I (We) are greatly concerned over the possibility of the enactment of the —— bill at this session and kindest regards to your wife and family.

• • • •

No. 3.—On this happy occasion our hearts are with you and yours. Be a man and vote No on the Senate amendment to the —— bill. Happy New Year!

• • • •

No 4.—Seasonal felicitations and our sincere wishes for continued health and happiness. A vote against the death sentence in the utility bill means your political extinction.

• • • •

No. 5.—Arriving on the —— train. Meet me at depot. Down with bureaucracy! Long live the spirit of the pioneers. Hope Ella is feeling better.

• • • •

No. 6.—Congratulations on the arrival of a bouncing baby boy (girl). May he (she) ever be a joy to your household. Big business must be protected. I call on you to override the President's veto.

Add similes: As stupidly stupid as a public utilities corporation in its propaganda activities.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Still Hoping By Harry J. Tuthill

Think of it... still in this rocket... still going up. Up where? Also, I wonder what time it is... and what day?
What a fine kettle of fish.
Tell me. The only thing I've been able to figure out exactly, is that the higher I go now the higher the bounce when I come down.... and land.
Trapped! I'll never again catch anything... even a mouse....in a trap, as long as I live.
Live! Well I'm not worrying about that... much.
Why get blue? Simply because I realize the odds against me are about ten million to zero.
I'm still going up.... I think I really have nothing to worry about until I start down....and land. Well...

500 Seek Rule Of Milk Sales By Commission

Rest of 4,000 Producers in Maryland Being Canvassed, Says Miller.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 24.—Between 500 and 600 requests have been received from milk producers who want the Maryland Milk Control Commission to take over regulation of the industry in the State, C. Wilbur Miller, chairman of the commission, said today.

These requests were received before any attempt was made to canvass the producers, Miller said. To learn the wishes of the rest of the 4,000 producers in this milkshed, he has sent out individual letters. Inclosed are cards they are asked to fill out and return if they want regulation.

A number of cards were returned in person by producers within a few hours after they received them, Miller said. The law setting up the commission provided that it shall function only in areas where a substantial number of the producers, distributors or consumers have asked such regulation. The definition of what part of the 4,000 producers is a substantial number is left to the commission, he declared.

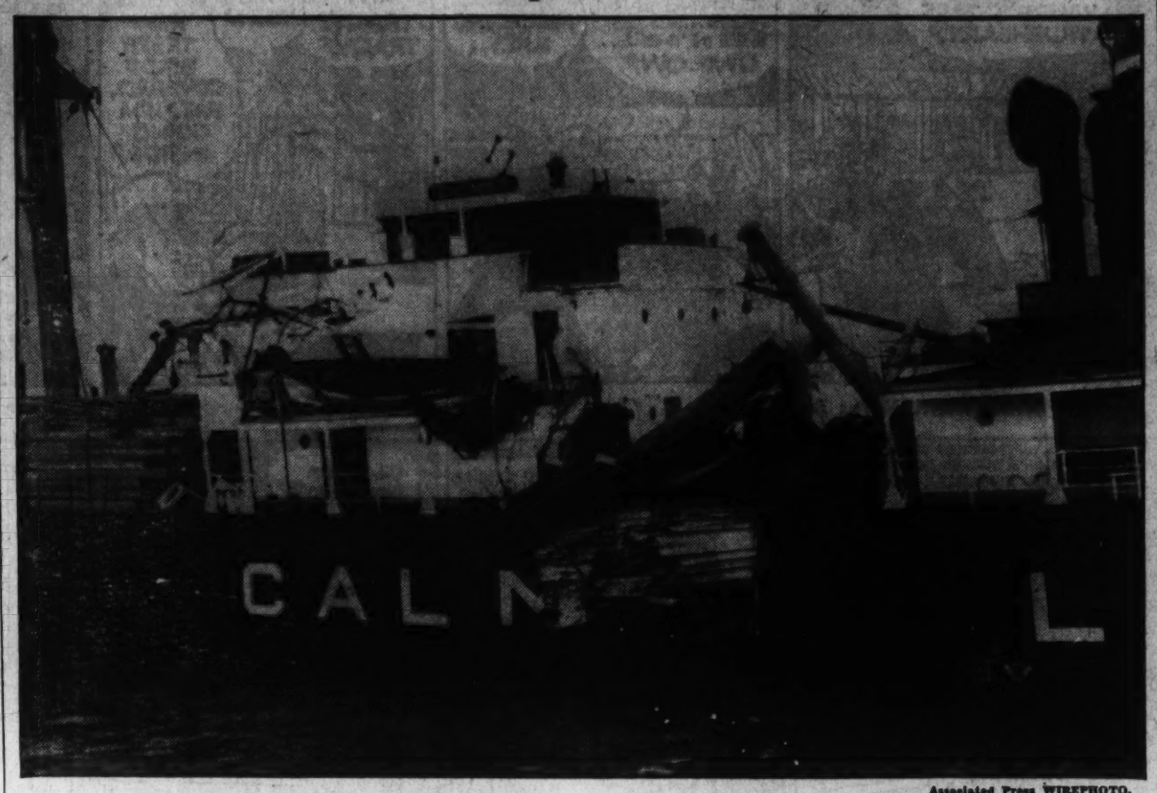
After Collision With Japanese Freighter in Pacific



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Crime Report Is Mutilated; Garnett Not Even Mentioned

get the Court of Appeals appointment he wanted."

As the committee met in executive session and members were reluctant to discuss what happened, there was speculation over the size of the vote by which the Garnett-Kindleberger section was killed. No record vote was taken. The estimates of members on the voice count ranged from 11 to 8 to 10 to 9.

Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, threw the committee into turmoil when he read the presidential commission by which Garnett was appointed. The document said he was named because the President "reposes special trust and confidence" in his ability.

For the committee to ask Garnett's ouster, Patman said, would mean that it failed to support the President.

A member who recalled Patman's long fight for cash payment of the bonus in the face of stern White House opposition retaliated:

"Have you always supported the President?"

Patman argued the cases were not comparable.

Supporters of the original report took solace from the fact that they succeeded in having left in the final draft a section which protested against prevalence of crime in the District and against enforcement methods employed here.

Friends of Garnett sought to have that section eliminated also. They contended that to leave such statements in the report reflected on Garnett and officials of the Police Department.

Only three members were said to have voted against final adoption of the revised report after deletion of the Garnett-Kindleberger section. They were Representatives Werner (Democrat), South Dakota; Patman and Jenckes (Democrat), Indiana.

The last-stand fight against Garnett was led by Chairman Randolph, of the sub-committee which conducted the crime investigation; Representative Reed (Republican), Illinois, and Schulte.

One of the arguments used by those who wished to retract the Garnett-Kindleberger recommendations was that the resolution under which the investigation was authorized did not stipulate that the committee could propose the removal of anyone from office.

Observers recalled that a sub-committee recommendation for the removal of Maj. Ernest W. Brown as police chief and other ranking officials of the department was eliminated some time ago.

Frequent meetings have been held by the committee since the report was drafted months ago by its sub-committee. In each instance the important votes were arranged in advance by political lieutenants of Farley.

Randolph was named to formally revise the report and submit it to the House.

Indications were that Blanton would take the floor again to defend Headley and his "gentleman's agreement."

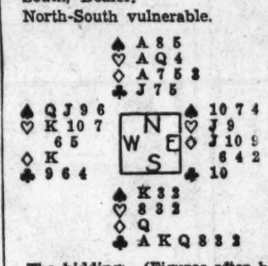
Overcalls Are Dangerous.

Overcalls are treacherous weapons at best. Often they give opponents an opportunity for a profitable penalty double when they could not score a game; still more often they give away the position of the high cards or the key to the distributional pattern and aid the eventual declarer in making his contract. Sometimes they goad opponents into bidding more than they might without help from the defending side. And perhaps the super-boomerang is the overcall that both pushes the opponents to a slam that should not be bid and gives them a count on distribution and finds that distribution fortuitous enough to let them make it. All of these things happened to West in today's hand.

South, Dealer.

North-South vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♣	1♠	2♠(1)	3◇(2)
4♣(3)	Pass	4NT(4)	Pass
5♣	Pass	6♣(5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

2—East tries to confuse the vulnerable opponents by bidding on a hopeless hand.
3—A free rebid based on the solidity of the club suit and the singleton diamond (plus the knowledge that opponents can not have their bids).
4—Conventional.
5—Three Aces plus partner's free rebid plus opponents obvious saving tactics goad North to a slam.

The Play.

West opened the King of diamonds and South rapidly counted up to ten tricks; the eleventh would depend on the heart finesse; the twelfth was possible only if a squeeze would produce it. In order to have a squeeze situation, however, it was necessary to give one trick to the opponents early. And South therefore made the unusual play of passing the King of diamonds, despite dummy's ace and his own singleton.

With no more diamonds to lead, West shifted to a trump as his only safe exit and declarer drew three rounds of trumps, took the heart finesse, cashed the Ace of hearts and the Ace of diamonds, discarding his losing heart. Declarer re-entered his hand by trumping a low diamond and continued the parade of two more trump leads. Compelled to guard against setting up dummy's last heart, West was forced to keep the King of that suit and only two spades. When the heart was not discarded, dummy, whose last four cards were a low heart, a low diamond and the Ace and a low spade, discarded the heart. In order to cover dummy's diamond, East, too, was forced to part with a spade and dummy's Ace and declarer's King and small spade won the last three tricks.

The squeeze must work against any defense, but its unusual feature was that declarer foresaw and prepared for it at the very first trick of the hand.
